AUSTRALIA SEEKING PEKING DIALOGUE

CANBERRA (Reuter) — Prime Minister William McMahon announced tonight plans to seek a dialogue with Peking after Oppositoin Labor leader Gough Whitlam had revealed he hopes to visit China next month.

McMahon said in a statement that his cabinet had come to this decision after noting the rapid succession of events suggesting a marked development in the willingness of China to deal with the rest of the world.

Living Costs Rise 32% Since 1961

OTTAWA — The average family's cost of living is approaching a level a third higher than it was 10 years ago, following a jump in April of nearly a full point in the consumer price index.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today that the index last month was 132.2, up 0.9 of a point from March and 2.5 points higher than a year ago.

For every $100 spent on food, housing, clothing and other consumer expenditures in 1961, the same goods and services last month cost $132.20. The bill will probably exceed $133.30 later this spring.

In computing its index, the bureau surveys the prices of about 300 consumer goods and services ranging from rents and new house prices to foods, beauty treatments and bicycles.

In the survey clothing, housing and food prices led the increase which the bureau said was about average for the last five years.

Under questioning by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield he said that the government had not taken the position that inflation had been licked "once and for all".

Stanfield said it was "the shortest licking in history."

In percentage terms, the index last month was 1.9 per cent higher than a year earlier — just under the two-per-cent annual rate of price increase many economists say is the borderline to inflation.

The gain for the month was seven-tenths of one per cent, compared with a March-to-April increase of six-tenths of one per cent last year.

The main increases were nine-tenths of one per cent in both the housing and clothing segments of the over-all index, which together make up more than 40 per cent of it. The food index, accounting for more than 25 per cent of the over-all index, rose seven-tenths of one per cent.

DOLLAR THE SAME

The over-all change in the price index for April, however, was insufficient to change the bureau's calculation of the current purchasing power of the 1961 consumer dollar. It remained at 76 cents, unchanged from March and down one cent from 77 cents in April, 1970.

U.K. Farm Offer Goes to Market

BRUSSELS (CP) — Geoffrey Rippon of Britain opened a major Common Market negotiating session today with a new proposal on adapting British farming to the system in the European Economic Community.

Rippon, leading the negotiations for British entry into the six-nation Common Market, called the morning meeting "very satisfactory."

Farm policy is a matter of critical importance to Canada and other Commonwealth countries which have had preferred access to the British market over the years and now stand to lose it.

A British spokesman said that he believes progress can be made on the farm question and also on these matters:

- Britain's membership in the European Atomic Energy Organization — known as Euratom — which is the market's organization for the peaceful use of nuclear energy.
- Free entry into Britain of limited quantities of some industrial products from countries outside the market. This would include aluminum oxide from Canada.

The market is expected to make a new offer to Britain on this question.

Dollar Firm, Pound Hit

From AP-Reuter

A strong demand for the U.S. dollar built up on the London foreign exchange market today as speculators rushed to cover the dollars they sold short last week to buy West German marks. The pound sterling was under persistent selling.

There was no evidence the speculators were selling marks or Swiss francs to take their profits from the increased value of those currencies. They seemed to be holding on to them in the hope of even bigger profits.

As a result, the pound was hit by selling described as persistent but not hectic. The pound opened at $2.41745, fractionally higher than Monday's close, but soon slid off to $2.4165, its lowest point in weeks.

State Dinner, Fireworks Will End Royal Tour

After a scheduled arrival in the Inner Harbor on board the Britannia at 3:30 this afternoon, the royal party will leave the yacht for a state dinner at Government House tonight at 7:30 p.m.

The quick drive will proceed east on Belleville, north on Government, east on Fort, north on Douglas, east on Pandora, south on Cook, east on Rockland to Government House.

At the dinner the Queen will deliver a nationally-televised address at 9 p.m. on CTV and 9:30 p.m. on CBC.

Last chance to see the Queen in Victoria will be when she returns to Britannia soon after 10:30 p.m. for the overnight sail to Vancouver.

The royal yacht is scheduled to leave the harbor at 11 p.m. There will be a big fireworks display as a farewell as the Britannia steams past Beacon Hill Park at 11:15 p.m.

The royal party leaves by air for London on Wednesday from Vancouver.

ROYAL APLOMB

The formal state dinner tonight follows a light-hearted day in Prince Rupert and the Queen Charlottes Monday.

One drunk caused brief embarrassment—this was at Sandspit—but the minor flutter was handled with royal aplomb on one hand and discretion by the RCMP on the other.

It was a terrible embarrassment to the Haida Indians because he was one of their dancers—or should have been—and it was impossible for the Queen not to see him.

Some residents of Cumberland, a small town just south of Courtenay, were upset Monday that the Queen's visit to their town had been cancelled.

Officials said a lack of time forced the removal of Cumberland from the royal itinerary but one resident, Mrs. Ellen Miller, 82, called it the "dirtiest trick" that had ever been played on her. Cumberland mayor Bill Moncrief turned down an invitation to meet the royal family at Comox, saying the issue had been already too controversial and that he did not want to spoil the Queen's tour.

Premier and Mrs. Bennett were happy guests aboard the Britannia Monday and today after receiving an apparently unexpected invitation from the Queen and Prince Philip. They spent the day cruising in the Strait of Georgia with the roal family after boarding Britannia at Comox.

INDIAN STORY BLASTED

The amount of publicity given to one drunken Indian at a royal tour event at Sandspit in the Queen Charlottes amounts to a "mis-use of journalism," Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said today.

Campbell, speaking as chairman of the provincial fund to aid Indian development, said the "over-emphasis" on the incident was indicative of "the idea that every Indian is a drunken Indian.

The incident occurred Monday when a Haida Indian dancer fell down in view of the royal family and had to be guided from the scene.

Union Pickets B.C. Legislature

For the first time in 14 years, a picket line was thrown up in front of the legislative buildings today by the B.C. government Employees Union.

It was an information picket by government electricians seeking higher wages. It lasted for half an hour at noon today.

The action preceded the union's second round of wage negotiations with the civil service commission beginning at 3 p.m.

SEEK $98 MORE

The electricians are currently receiving $865 a month and are seeking $963. Their demands are based on wages paid to electricians employed by other public agencies, an official said.

B.C. Hydro pays $917 a month, major hospitals $971, lower mainland municipalities $899 and the construction industry $1,064, the official said.

INJUNCTION

The pickets, also set up at the Civil Service Commission office at 544 Michigan Street and a number of government offices throughout the province.

Picketing of government buildings is illegal but a deputy public works minister, Arnold Webb, said he didn't know whether any action —likely by injunction — would be taken if the picketing is only for a short period.

Webb said the first he heard of the picketing was this morning from a reporter.

ROLLS-ROYCE, LOCKHEED REACH TERMS

LONDON (Reuter) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. of the United States signed a conditional contract with Rolls-Royce today to buy RB211 engines from the British firm for the Tri-Star airbus.

The contract is conditional upon obtaining approval of the U.S. Congress, needed for a U.S. government guarantee for the $250 million in bank loans that Lockheed wants to continue the airbus project.

The contract marks a major step in the series of negotiations that have gone on since the financial collapse of Rolls-Royce in February.

PM 'Accepts Blame' For Unemployment

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The federal government accepts the blame for high unemployment in Canada, Prime Minister Trudeau said in a radio interview Monday.

Mr. Trudeau told interviewer Jack Webster he regretted the high unemployment but said inflation with high employment was not an acceptable alternative to no inflation with high unemployment.

"If we could live with inflation and have a booming economy and more employment, that would be great."

But 50 per cent of Canada's produce now goes into export markets and "if we let inflation run away in Canada we will lose our markets and the workers who try to produce for those markets will be out of a job."

Mr. Trudeau said many of those now on Canada's unemployment rolls were not heads of families but young people who left school early, people at retirement age who wish to continue working and an increasing number of women.

The broadcast consisted of taped excerpts of an Ottawa interview at which Mr. Webster was one of several newsmen. The interview will be seen in full Sunday night on the CBC network, but Mr. Webster aired his part of the interview in advance on his radio program.

COVERS WATERFRONT

In the interview the prime minister also discussed pay increases for members of Parliament, the monarchy, the War Measures Act and a wide range of other topics.

He said he did not see unemployment and economic slowdown as the cause of civil disorder in Quebec last October.

There is higher unemployment in the Maritime provinces, he said. And "there is violence in other parts of the world where the economies are high and moving."

Mr. Trudeau said he did not believe the monarchy was a sore point in relations between French and English Canadians although French Canadians are more "passive" in their loyalty to the Queen.

"The monarchy will last as long as this government lasts," he said. "If you abolish monarchy, what do you replace it with?"

Mr. Trudeau said if he were asked to be president in a parliamentary system the answer would be "quite clearly, 'no.' I'm not interested in symbolic jobs."

DEFENDS RAISE

The prime minister defended the raise in salaries of members of Parliament to $18,000 a year from $12,000—along with a tax free expense allowance of $8,000 — for a total of $26,000.

The 50 per cent increase—the first since 1963—is less than the increase in professors' and engineers' salaries in the last nine years and about equal to the increase in industrial wages, he said.

"If constituents think their particular member of Parliament really doesn't earn his salary and really doesn't spend his allowance in an honest way, they should throw him out."

If the salary scale had not been increased, "I am sure we would have lost some of our good members."

Asked if he considered the pay increases badly timed, Mr. Trudeau replied: "Would the timing have been better at the height of the inflationary period when we were telling people to cool it?"

STUART UNDERHILL

W. A. IRWIN

W. A. Irwin Retires; New Publisher Named

W. Arthur Irwin today announced his retirement as publisher of the Victoria Daily Times and vice-president of Victoria Press Ltd. effective June 1. He will be succeeded by Vancouver-born Stuart Underhill, assistant general manager of F. P. Publications and formerly deputy general manager of the Reuter News Agency in London, England.

Irwin joined the Times and Victoria Press in October, 1964, following 11 years in the diplomatic service during which he served successively as Canadian High Commissioner in Australia, Canadian Ambassador to Brazil, Ambassador to Mexico and delegate to the United Nations General Assembly. Prior to going abroad, he was chairman of the National Film Board and prior to that editor of Maclean's Magazine with which he was associated for 25 years. He entered journalism as a reporter for the old Toronto Mail and Empire, subsequently moving to The Globe where he served as parliamentary correspondent and editorial writer.

Stuart Underhill, 56, began his journalistic career with The Canadian Press in Vancouver. Subsequent assignments with the national news agency took him to Toronto, New York and London. His reporting while serving as chief of CP's London bureau won him a National Newspaper Award.

In 1950 Underhill joined Reuter, the international news agency with headquarters in London. His posts with Reuter included those of managing editor and deputy general manager. He returned to Canada last year and after a period in Montreal as assistant publisher of the Financial Times, joined F. P. Publications in Winnipeg as assistant general manager.

Underhill is a son of the late Canon H. J. Underhill and Mrs. Underhill formerly of Vancouver.

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The $10 million addition to the Opportunity for Youth program today probably clinches four environmental projects for 56 youths in the Victoria area.

"They have been approved in principle already and today's announcement makes it look pretty good for official confirmation," said David Anderson (L — Esquimalt-Saanich).

The projects involve Dr. Marcus Bell's Environment 100 organization and three other stream and trail clearing projects proposed by the Amalgamated Conservation Society. (See also Page 3.)

Some 15 jobs for students are involved in the Environment 100 information clearing house to be established in the University of Victoria's Student Union Building.

They will compile environmental packages on specific topics, set up an environmental library and conduct research.

The conservation society, comprising 20 different organizations, has three projects under final consideration here.

The first would put 16 youths to work clearing the West Coast Lifesaving Trail. The second would employ 10 in the Sooke area and 10 more in the San Juan-Cowichan River watersheds improving streams and reclaiming salmon fry.

The third would employ five more planting trees along salmon streams.

The projects are only a portion of the total proposals forwarded from the Victoria area but because of the overwhelming national response to the federal experiment they are the only ones left in the running for approval.

STANFIELD CALLS FOR INCOME TAX CUT

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called today for a cut in federal income taxes of between six and seven per cent.

He also renewed his appeal for removal of the three-percent surtax on personal and corporation income tax and for a big reduction in taxes on building materials.

Council Raises Boulevard Tax

A half-cent boulevard tax increase approved by Victoria council last summer — and forgotten by at least one alderman — was adopted formally today.

City officials had to leave the council chamber and dig up the record to convince Ald. Tom Christie the tax increase had been earlier approved.

The boulevard tax is increased from 2½ to three cents per square foot of boulevard fronting on private property.

A bylaw raising the tax was passed by council along with the city's other tax and expenditure bylaws for 1971.

RAISE REVENUES

The boulevard tax increase is expected to raise revenues from that source by 19.2 per cent or $14,900 — from $77,800 to $92,700.

Council's finance committee approved the change Aug. 6, 1970, and formally approved the increase in full council Aug. 13.

Ald. Tom Christie and Peter Pollen voted against all the bylaws today, after Pollen complained he missed the chance to consider them separately. The two aldermen led an attempt last week to cut the 1971 mill rate increase by more than the five mills finally decided on.

Final expenditures by the city are as follows: general government, $2,083,628; protection of persons and property, $4,219,591; public works, $840,005; sanitation and waste removal, $1,070,830; water distribution, $908,915; public health, $377,819; social welfare, $5,347,445; recreation and community services, $2,344,434; debt, $1,386,300; miscellaneous, $719,314; education transfers, $5,572,677.

Revenues: general and debt levy, $6,708,662; hospital levy, $72,463; other, $1,048,880.

Other revenues: licences and permits, $571,590; rents and franchises, $93,000; fines, $340,000; interest and penalties, $161,050; service charges, $265,800; recreation and community services, $475,275; contributions and grants, $7,536,836; government enterprises, $123,770; public utility, $1,128,000; debt charges recoverable, $153,640; miscellaneous, $299,000; tax levied for education, $5,572,677; surplus, $220,315.

. . . PRICES

the index is to say that consumer prices last month were 32.2 per cent higher than the average for 1961. Food prices were up 29.1 per cent, housing costs up 36 per cent, and clothing prices up 27.9.

All other sectors of the overall index also rose last month, except the index of tobacco and alcohol prices.

The bureau noted that while the April index was 1.9 per cent higher than a year ago, there has been a 1.8-per-cent increase in the last four months. The index fell or held steady from last August to November and dropped in December.

The all-items index covers about 300 goods and services that are prominent in the spending habits of urban families of two to four persons, living in cities of more than 30,000 and having incomes which in 1957 ranged from $2,500 to $7,000 a year.

The bureau cautions that the index is unlikely to represent closely the experience of any one family, or to reflect changes in prices experienced by individuals or families in other income classes or in particular communities.

For 10 months, until February this year, the all-items index fluctuated within a relatively narrow range between 129.6 and 130.5. It broke out of this to reach 130.9 in February and 131.3 in March.

During most of last year, the rate of year-to-year change in the prices index fell significantly. In February, 1970, the index was running five per cent ahead of a year earlier. By December, the increase was down to 1.5 per cent over December, 1969, and in the first three months of this year it started to accelerate but remained less than two per cent.

Two per cent annual increases in consumer prices are widely regarded by economists as all that should be permitted in an economy such as Canada's, to avoid inflation.

Nurses Urge Intervention

The Registered Nurses Association of British Columbia Monday urged Health Minister Ralph Loffmark and Labor Minister James Chabot to intervene in a stalled labor dispute at Sandringham private hospital.

The association, in letters to the ministers, said the continuing impasse at the hospital is not in the best interests of patient care and urged steps to find a solution to the problem.

The dispute began Sept. 30 when 28 female employees went on strike in an effort to obtain a first contract with the hospital as members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The main issues are job security and a basic wage demand of $2 an hour.

Crash Injures Motorcyclist

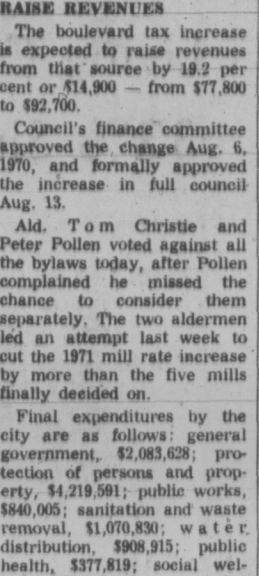
Wayne Shaw, 3353 Henderson, Oak Bay police said, was riding north on Foul Bay about 3:45 p.m. when he ran into a car waiting to make a left turn on to Taylor.

The car was driven by Nicholas Cote, 482 Foster.



SURGEON Dr. Christiaan Barnard early today performed his sixth — and the world's 159th — heart transplant operation in a South African hospital. The patient, Dirk Van Zyl, 45, is reported to be in good condition.

CHILDREN SUSPECTED IN SHED FIRE

Fire department officials believe children playing with matches started a fire Monday evening that destroyed a workshed and damaged another shed, and a trailer and a pickup truck at the construction site of the new Victoria Press Ltd. building on Douglas.

Deputy Chief Carl Coates said youngsters were seen in the area before the fire about 7 p.m.

He said estimates of damage had not been complete.

58 Per Cent Hike In Price of Lumber

Run-offs caused by warm weather and possible forest closures later may further retard supplies of logs for local mills, the Vancouver Island Building Supply Dealers' Association, said today.

The association earlier reported a price increase of 58 per cent since November on utility grade fir used predominantly in apartment construction.

The increase is the result of a serious shortage of logs caused by heavy snows last winter which cut down logging operations.

"It is conceivable that we may never catch up this year," a spokesman for the association said. "This would lead to further price increases and create hardships for dealers."

He also noted the export market is firming. This could also put upward pressure on local prices because of the demand for lumber.

One local mill has issued seven major price increases since December, 1970, he pointed out as an example.

"It is becoming very difficult to quote on prices of lumber to builders," he said.

"We can quote on current stocks but it's too much of a gamble to quote prices on lumber needed in three months time."

Shadow Mischief

. . . THE QUEEN

year-old was crying because her sister had taken her to the court house square to see the Queen, and she just wasn't big enough to get a view of anything.

At Sandspit, another child got beyond the rope barrier and was restored to his family by an RCMP officer.

"Was he resisting arrest?" Philip asked, and he got another laugh for that one-liner.

It was another on-the-go day for the Royal Family with visits to Prince George, in the geographical heart of the province; a flight to Prince Rupert; then to Sandspit, Canada's most westerly island possessions, and back to the royal yacht Britannia which was berthed off Comox on Vancouver Island.

At Prince Rupert, Indians held a rain dance in a place where the locals claim it rains 364 days a year, watched by a singing group called the Prince Rupert Raindrop Choir. They are a group of little girls who wear hoods that are supposed to signify raindrops and every singer has her own umbrella.

The Royal Family took a 15-minute cruise aboard the Signal, a workhorse fishing vessel — the greatest contrast possible to the luxury of the royal yacht — and were presented with a box containing a freshly-caught halibut on ice.

"Holy mackerel," said a member of the royal household as the presentation was made.

Signal skipper Mel Holkestad and his crew took the seiner out with Philip going up to the bridge to get the best possible vantage point.

The Signal was freshly painted but otherwise typical of the fishing craft that sail out of this north coast community where the border of the Alaska Panhandle starts only 20 miles away.

The Queen was in terracotta pink and Anne was in emerald green as they made their rounds of a countryside of totem poles, salt water and Indians who marauded the west coast in war-canoe expeditions a century ago.

Jubilee To Get Generator

The awarding of a $97,640 contract to provide Royal Jubilee Hospital with much-needed stand-by electrical generating equipment has been announced by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark.

The contract, awarded to Ruston Diesels Ltd. of Vancouver, will provide the hospital with an additional 500 kilowatts of emergency power in the case of a power blackout in Victoria.

Equipment for 300 kilowatts of emergency power was installed at the hospital in 1960 but hospital administrator Dr. A. C. Pickles said this was insufficient to cover every part of the hospital in the event of an emergency.

"We would have had to be selective as to which areas could be serviced," Pickles said. "That would be a dicey situation if the power failure lasted any length of time."

Pickles said there had been a dramatic increase in the use of advanced medical electronic equipment since 1960 and that the equipment had to be kept going to get full value.

Approval of the contract is still needed by the Capital Regional Hospital District but a spokesman said today there would be no problem in getting the project approved since the hospital district has long been a strong supporter of the idea.

Without the new power equipment, only vital areas such as operating rooms would have been supplied with power if a blackout had occurred.

375 LOGGERS WALK OUT

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — About 375 loggers walked off the job today in a wildcat strike at the Franklin River logging division of MacMillan Bloedel near Port Alberni in a dispute over the size of logging crews.

A spokesman for MacMillan Bloedel said the strike is wildcat and illegal.

COLOR THEIR FACES RED

TORONTO (CP) — The advertisement in a United States magazine said: Convert your black and white TV to color. Send $15 for the kit. According to the Ontario Consumer Protection Bureau, one man did. "And he got the kit," the bureau reported. It was a paint brush and a can of paint.

Sidney Merchants Hit Parking Plan

The petition, organized by local barber L. S. Gudmundson, was read at council Monday night. It recommends scrapping a Beacon Avenue traffic study which is being carried out by two municipal employees, assessor John Chapman and building inspector Hans Schneider.

CHANGE URGED

This report has been studied by the long-range planning committee which has recommended to council that present angle parking on Beacon be changed to parallel parking as soon as possible.

Gudmundson told council that it was out of touch with local merchants.

"It is incredible that businessmen must organize to protect themselves from the people they have elected," he said.

Mayor Stanley Dear objected to this criticism.

"Early this year, council sought to improve the planning committee by including two representatives of the Chamber of Commerce. Surely this is an indication that council is seeking co-operation."

He assured petitioners that a public hearing will be held if parking changes are pursued.

Only Ald. Wilkie Gardner approved the petition.

Gardner, a Beacon Avenue merchant, congratulated Gundmundson and said the petition should be framed "so that future councils will always consider the people concerned." He registered an opposing vote when the petition was received and filed.

In other business, council adopt a joint fire committee budget of $19,512 with North Saanich on the recommendation of Ald. Hugh Hollingworth. He insisted that there be firm understanding that the Sidney fire department will change over to independent operation of the fire and ambulance protection service July 1.

VALUES AFFECTED

"The propaganda would indicate the noise is never-ending," wrote Mrs. Aiers, who felt that real estate values were unfavorably affected.

Gardner agreed that one area of Sidney should not be considered noisier than another.

"It's pretty general," he said.

Ald. Norma Sealey insisted, however, that transport department study indicates that some areas have a more intense noise level than others and that residential use of these areas should be discouraged.

Furthermore, she said, "Mrs. Aiers has personally told me she uses very satisfactory ear plugs."

Ottawa to Emphasize Rehabilitation In Future Prison Reforms, Says Goyer

By PETER McNELLY

Canada's prison system has failed to protect society from criminals, and the country must now shift its emphasis toward rehabilitation, Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said Monday in Victoria.

Goyer was speaking to a group of about 30 Liberal Party members at the War Amputees Hall as part of a one-day visit to Vancouver Island.

Under questioning from the group, Goyer said 80 per cent of Canada's prison inmates return to a life on crime after they are released from jail.

"The system of first the protection of society and second, rehabilitation, has proven to be a failure. The reverse may not work, but let's try it," Goyer said.

FAILURE

He mentioned the recent uprising at Kingston Penitentiary as a good example of how the old system fails to preserve an inmate's dignity.

Goyer peppered his answers with words and phrases like "dialogue," "rehabilitation," "adaptability" and the "liberalization of society" during 45 minutes of questioning.

He said the government is no longer committed simply to jailing lawbreakers. Instead, policy now is to "increase the possibility of rehabilitation and increase compensation to families" which have been victims of crime.

A review of capital punishment must be completed by the end of 1972, Goyer said, but he indicated he does not support a return to death sentences for murderers.

With the exceptions of murders of policemen and prison guards, Canada abolished capital punishment in 1967 for a five-year trial period.

Goyer said many people believe society is not prepared to accept the abolition of capital punishment. But he asked the group to look at the problem this way:

"How do you deal with this problem as a human being? For a family it is not a solution because one was killed to say we should kill as a society."

He added that simply being in favor of an end to capital punishment is no longer a significant policy. Society must move toward more parole.

But, he said, "the population must accept some kinds of risks. There are going to be mistakes."

Goyer said he does not believe governments can or should assume full responsibility for the rehabilitation of criminals.

He called for and promised more federal money to expanded programs from private agencies like the Elizabeth Fry and John Howard Societies.

NEW FIELD

Goyer said criminology is a new field and can stand experimentation. He said the government will help establish a "social animation" program with private parole assistance agencies to get the people more interested in and aware of their responsibilities in rehabilitative work.

Goyer is responsible for the National Parole Board and National Parole Services. These have a $10 million annual budget which he said will be greatly increased.

The solicitor-general also is responsible for the Canadian Penitentiary Service and the RCMP. Goyer said Canada has 7,600 inmates in 35 federal prisons. The government spends $18 million annually on the prison system, and the prisoner's share of the costs is $8,000 per inmate per year.

Goyer said this is about double what a worker would receive on unemployment insurance.

As proof of the government's emphasis on rehabilitation, Goyer said he halted the construction of a federal prison planned near Mission, B.C., because the jail would have been essentially no different from other jails.

A MODEL

He promised that when the new jail is built, it will be a model example of a rehabilitative institution.

Discussing the Kingston riot, Goyer said inmates weren't making the normal demands for better food and living conditions.

"It was the quality of life, exactly the same as the society in which we live. It was the system. They were saying we were treated as human beings, and this was not enough, and they were right. They should be treated as citizens. This is why they never came out with a set of demands."

Goyer added that prisons still enforce many "archiac rules" which strip prisoners of their dignity. He cited the example of the Kingston inmates being forced to leave the jail with their hand on their heads as they entered the vans which would take them to Millhaven Penitentiary.

Goyer promised a full press tour of Millhaven after the prison's population has been reduced and normality established. He denied that the institution is equipped with bugging devices and said the press ought to have looked into this during a press tour several months ago before the jail was opened.

Local Photographer Wins With a Bird

Local photographer-naturalist David Stirling, 3500 Salisbury Way, was one of six winners of the 1970 annual photography contest sponsored by Animals, an international wildlife magazine published in England.

He shot the photograph while in Australia last winter as leader of a month-long nature tour.

A naturalist with the B.C. parks branch Stirling has lived in Victoria since 1958.

Birds and photography have been among his main interests for most of his life, he said.

Prizes for each of the six contest winners are a silver medal and a set of Time Life Nature Library books.

Dues Deduction Decision Monday

Greater Victoria school trustees will decide Monday whether to stop deducting British Columbia Federation of Teachers' dues from teacher pay cheques.

Trustee Peter Bunn gave notice of the motion at the board's education committee meeting Monday night. Several trustees indicated support for the motion, while others opposed it.

Bunn maintained that the motion was intended to discourage "irresponsible actions" by the BCTF, such as conducting a one-day strike earlier this year in an effort to seek higher pension increases for retired teachers.

Bunn was supported in his motion by trustee Dr. Philip Ney, who argued that the move might promote division of the BCTF into two separate functioning bodies: one to conduct bargaining negotiations with management and one to seek higher standards of teaching excellence.

H. A. Knight said the move could be construed as a coercive move on the part of the board if such an action were recommended. "If I were a teacher I might interpret it that way," he said.

School board chairman Allan McKinnon also said the move could be seen as an act of antagonism. He noted that to date no applications had been received by the board from teachers who wished to discontinue membership in the BCTF, an action which has been enabled by legislation passed by the B.C. government this year.

McKinnon said the in-service training program sponsred by the BCTF "does more to uplift teaching standards than a lot of the courses taught in the University of Victoria's faculty of education."

HARD CORE

McKinnon said that if the deductions were not made, membership in the BCTF would likely decline and that many of those remaining in the organization would be hard-core militant teachers.

"It's the other type of teacher we want to keep in the BCTF," McKinnon said.

It was also noted that the board's action, if followed through as outlined in Bunn's motion, would have a direct effect on the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association instead of the BCTF, which held the one-day strike.

Trustee Victor Rogers said, "Why should we deduct their dues? We don't need to know if teachers are members of the BCTF or not."

In other business, the board went over, resignations, retirements, leaves-of-absence, transfer applications, and appointments for the next school year.

Sound System Approved

Expenditures totalling $3,675 to provide better sound facilities in Central Junior Secondary's gymnasium and to improve Cedar Hill Junior's library were approved Monday night by Greater Victoria school board's finance and legal affairs committee.

The proposed expenditures will go before the full school board at its regular meeting next Monday.

Sound system improvements at Central Junior are expected to cost $1,800 with the addition of two sound columns and alterations in the present system.

Committee member S. H. Dietze pointed out that Central Junior has the largest gymnasium in the district and that the public uses it more than other school gymnasiums.

Library materials are to be moved into the school's present lunchroom, with the art room taking over the present library space and the lunchroom moving to the present art room.

Total cost of the conversion will be $1,875.

The committee also recommended that an amount up to $1,000 be authorized for a study into the school board's buget format and improved methods of accounting for board expenditures.

GOYER WON'T DENY POLICE FILES ON MPs

Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer Monday again refused to deny that the RCMP have dossiers on some members of Parliament.

During a question and answer session with Vancouver Island Liberals at the War Amputees Hall in Victoria, Goyer failed to shed any new light on the issue which was first raised in the Commons in April by the Progressive Conservatives.

"I see no indication that the members of Parliament represent a privileged class. They are equal before the law," Goyer said in response to a direct question about RCMP surveillance.

"We don't have special activities on special groups. This has been the policy up to now and it won't change as long as I'm in office unless there is a decision by government or by Parliament."

Goyer told the group of about 30 people the cabinet is studying the entire question of the right to privacy and the right of police to gather information needed to stop subversion and crime.

He said he cannot discuss the study, but hoped legislation would be forthcoming. Goyer promised the group he will fight any move which would allow private security agencies to intrude upon an individual's privacy.

Then, in the style of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, Goyer answered the question by posing another.

"If we want better efficiency in the police, we have to accept more intrusion into lives of individuals. You can't have it both ways."

He said it is proper for civil libertarians to strive for the protection of individual privacy, but those who support this position must accept less efficient police work as the inevitable alternative.

The solicitor-general was in Victoria for a one-day visit with federal prison and parole authorities.

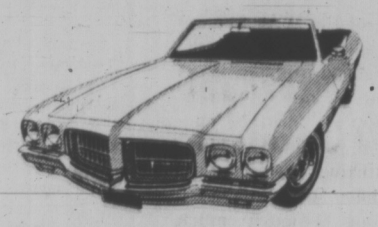
You can spend less than last time for your new car... without giving up a thing!

Let's say you're now driving a big, full-size car, 3 or 4 years old. And you're ready to trade on a new '71. Well, you know before you see a dealer that prices haven't stood still.

But, let's get one thing straight, the full-size Pontiac you buy today has had a lot of new features added.

However, we said you can spend less.

Think intermediate. Trim-size!



We don't know what kind of big car you own but it's a good bet a trim '71 LeMans has almost as much headroom.

And maybe even more legroom.

Give up comfort? No way.

As for performance, a LeMans has a 250-cubic-inch standard Six that's all business when it comes to moving.

If it takes a V8 to move you, you have up to five big ones on the option list. Even a 455 cubic incher!

And all Pontiac engines operate efficiently on regular or the new no-lead or low-lead gasolines. Besides the lower exhaust emissions attainable with this engine/fuel combination, there are benefits in longer life for your spark plugs, exhaust system and other engine parts.

Give up performance? Not in a Wide-Track Pontiac LeMans. So we've cleaned up that matter.

How about all the extra-value things LeMans has for you that just weren't around back in '67 or '68.

Like fiberglass panelling that resists dings and dents and won't ever rust? It surrounds the grille and headlamps.

How about steel Side-guard beams in all doors and a protective Cargo-guard bulkhead in the trunk?

Not to mention Pontiac's windshield-embedded antenna that's yours when you order a radio.

There are thirteen trim-size models in Pontiac's intermediate lineup.

Turbulent Currency Seas

THE CURRENT MONETARY crisis has shown up an inherent problem of the Eruopean Common Market. Regardless of how firmly boundary lines may be drawn around the component nations, forming them into an economic unit, the fact is that the members are still diverse entities with individual problems, strengths and weaknesses, whose effects cannot always be met by a common policy applied to all. Thus, West Germany, with what for some time has been the world's strongest currency, has difficulties to surmount which are not found to the same extent among its fellow-members of the ECM.

It is the great demand for German marks, expressed in terms of dollars, which in part has brought on the present crisis. The exchange value of the mark was pegged at a price which does not represent the realities of the market. Bonn has therefore found it necessary to free the mark of its arbitrary restriction and permit it to find a level based on what is offered for it. Canada did the same thing last year, when the pressure of demand in terms of United States dollars made it impossible to hold our currency within its assigned values.

West Germany's action has the reluctant acquiescence of its ECM colleagues, but it took a 20-hour negotiating session to arrive at ostensible agreement — and even then there were two different versions of the length of time the "floating" situation is to last. Germany estimated the free market condition will be in effect for months, although eventually there would be a return to the fixed rate. But France was of the opinion that the situation would last only a few weeks. Clearly there are some troubled times ahead for the Common Market organization.

The crisis in terms of American dollars was sharpened by the action of the United States in trying to ease the unemployment problem by lowering interest rates in order to stimulate building and production. This step tends to send international investment out of the country, looking for better bargains, and the speculators' choice was West Germany. The resulting influx added to the overloading of the currency market, already affected by the high West German interest rate, engineered in an effort to counter inflation but attracting money from abroad.

Another major factor, of course, is the existing balance of payments of the United States which has thrown heavy pressure on the money markets. The result has been a growing imbalance between the market value of currencies and the fixed value, particularly of the dollar in terms of the mark. Since the United States would not devalue its currency, West Germany found it necessary to free the mark to find its own level—at a considerable premium.

It is obvious that such a situation can quickly become exaggerated by the actions of currency speculators who deal in large amounts. A trend can become a landslide when huge sums are thrown into the market to accelerate the movement. If the ECM is to survive without recurrent incidents such as this one, it seems clear that some more uniform currency system will have to be devised. It is not long since the French franc was under fire as the dollar now is, and the British pound has suffered recurring attacks.

The nations of the West are too closely bound today, through trade, multinational corporations, loans and other ties, to be able to operate efficiently without a form of currency which will preserve stability while still permitting business freedom. Efforts have been made to achieve this, but obviously much remains to be done. The success of Western trade relations depends on such a solution. It may be that the very existence of the European Common Market is also at stake.

Movement of the Glacier

THE POLICY STATEMENT issued by Mr. Charles Bray of the U.S. State Department on April 28 is a sign of impending and profound change in the traditional stance of the United States towards the two existing governments in Peking and Taipei. It puts in doubt the sovereignty of the Nationalist Chinese over Formosa and the nearby Pescadores islands.

Mr. Bray announced that the status of Formosa was subject to international resolution or, failing that, could be settled by negotiations between Formosa and mainland China. Mr. Chow Shu-kai, the Nationalist foreign minister, responded to the State Department's remarks by saying Nationalist officials were "surprised and amazed" at the new position.

Evidently the United States is moving towards a recognition of the Peking regime. Mainland China has insisted that the touchstone of recognition by other governments is the acceptance of Peking's claim to sovereignty over Formosa. By conceding that Formosa's status is negotiable by one means or another, Washington is perhaps indicating that it is willing to travel a long way down Peking's road. It is not easy, however, to reconcile the State Department's position as set out in Mr. Bray's observation about the negotiable nature of Formosa's status, with State Secretary William Rogers' virtually simultaneous statement that the U.S. remains committed to the Nationalists and that Peking still has an expansionist policy.

The United States is pulling out all the stops on the Chinese organ and Peking and Taipei can select their favorite tunes. Nonetheless, the American drift towards acceptance of United Nations membership for Peking and eventual U.S. recognition of the People's Republic is apparent. The distance the United States is currently prepared to go in the direction of Peking's claim to Formosa could be another sign that the U.S. means diplomatic business in the Far East.

Cold, Damp, but Combustible

WARMER WEATHER DURING the last few days may change the picture considerably but with hazard ratings low in British Columbia forests, except at lower elevations in the Kamloops district, 165 outbreaks, costing $10,600, had already occurred when the first report of the fire season was published last Friday.

This is a very moderate total compared to other years in which spring has been brighter and drier, but it carries its own warning. As we move into summer the risks will increase, the need for caution will grow.

By May 7 the Vancouver District, including this island, had recorded 16 fires in a season that seemed relatively safe. No adequate means have yet been found to prevent fires started by lightning. But the responsibility rests heavily in the months ahead on people to avoid the carelessness which causes so many outbreaks each season.

WITH CREDIBILITY DESTROYED — By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Does the Nation Next Lose Its Shirt?

IT is easy to see, and easy to hear from an angry public, that Prime Minister Trudeau made this largest mistake, so far, in proposing to raise the wages of Parliament by an excessive amount. It is not easy, however, to predict the consequences of this act, but they will be large, too. The first consequence is to destroy what is nowadays called the government's economic credibility. The pious sermons on restraint, the earnest appeals to labor and business, the vows of governmental chastity now look rather sad or comic, depending on your sense of humor. Having accepted the wage increase and lost its first chance to seize a winning issue, the Conservative opposition looks equally incredible, as before.

Hutchison

If this were the only consequence of Mr. Trudeau's mistake the nation could take it in its stride. After all, the cost of paying high parliamentary wages is a small item in the federal budget, the public does not wish to be mean with its hard-working servants and they have not been paid enough for their jobs.

But unfortunately something much more important than the taxpayers' money and the prospects of the next election is involved in this dismal affair. After discrediting its whole anti-inflation policy by inflating Parliament, what does the government do next? That is the question now confronting us.

Experiment That Failed

To understand it we must remember that the government and the nation have lately conducted a daring experiment and suffered a traumatic experience in trying to stablize prices. And, with some brief success, the experiment has failed.

It was certain to fail when the experts sold Mr. Trudeau the idea that orthodox methods of tight money could cure a problem no longer orthodox but entirely new — new because the unexpected power of the labor unions was great enough to keep wages and production costs rising fast at a time of recession and unemployment. In their wildest dreams the experts could not foresee this unprecedented phenomenon.

To be sure, prices rose less during the last year in Canada than in any other industrialized country but at the cost of the highest unemployment rate in the Western world. With continuing wage increases, prices are bound to keep rising, despite intermediate fluctuations, and their rise will be stimulated by the government's reversal of orthodox policy, its desperate attempt to heat the economy up again.

Is it fair to say, then, that the government was wrong from the start in trying to cool the over-heated economy? Was the experiment a total loss? No, in fairness it must be said that the government acted with a courage unknown in other Western governments and the experiment, though painful, had its uses because it demonstrated conclusively that orthodox methods cannot succeed in the new social situation.

The government's critics will say that it should have forseen all these results, as they assuredly did not, but this is asking too much of human nature. Today, when the results are clear to everybody, most of the critics, notably the Conservative opposition, have nothing to offer except hand-wringing, breast-beating and more inflation. The single prominent politician to offer an alternative is Paul Hellyer who, lacking direct power, can only plead for legal controls of wages and profits.

His plea could be disregarded so long as the prime minister was under the curious illusion, as recklessly announced last December, that inflation had been extinguished. When obviously it has not been extinguished but is now in healthy fighting trim for the next round, Mr. Hellyer, or the ideas that he represented, can no longer be disregarded.

Route to Crisis

With the benefit of hindsight we see that the government has moved to its present crisis through two distinct stages in one year — deliberate fiscal deflation until last spring and deliberate inflation since then — always under the illusion that neither would be pushed to a dangerous extreme, in the hope that something would turn up. As in the case of the late Wilkins Micawber, nothing good has turned up and the government faces the third stage, the ultimate ghastly decision so long postponed and evaded.

Unless, by some unlikely miracle, the merry-go-round of wages, costs and prices suddenly stops, the government will be forced into direct controls of some sort. Or else, it will lose not merely its last shreds of credibility but the nation's shirt as well.

These alternatives may be postponed for a little while yet. Doubtless the government is tempted to escape a decision by calling a quick autumn election before the economy gets into a worse mess. But even this easy way out has been seriously jeopardized, if not blocked, by the mistake of raising parliamentary wages at the worst possible moment. For the public will fasten the blame on Mr. Trudeau, not on the consenting Conservatives, and quite rightly, too, because he alone is prime minister and must accept the responsibility of his office.

Abnormal

In normal circumstances no government would risk an election in such a sour political climate, but the circumstances are not normal for many reasons, among them the alarming sickness of the official opposition. Hence while the government may take the plunge in the autumn and win by default, that would settle nothing more than the partisan stripe of the treasury benches. The alternatives of controlling the economy or letting it go to hell on its present course would still remain to be chosen, one way or the other.

Without the least information on the great Canadian mystery of the Trudeau mind, I would guess that in the end the prime minister will choose controls and another Canadian experiment. I would also suspect that he wishes he had done so before now.

The Student Vote: Not 'Can' But 'Where'

By FRANK MANKIEWICZ and TOM BRADEN
From Washington

WHEN Dale Kesten went down to the county clerk's office in Ithaca, N.Y., earlier this year to register to vote, the clerk refused to take his registration. Kesten is planning a lawsuit to require him to do so. On the eventual outcome of that legal battle will turn the careers of more than 30 congressmen, and perhaps the immediate political direction of the nation.

Kesten is 19 years old. He is, therefore, eligible to vote in 1972 for president, senator and congressmen. He wants to vote in Ithaca, where he attends Cornell University. The local establishment in Ithaca, as everywhere else where there are large student populations, wants him to vote at his parents' home — in this case Westport, Conn.

There, in a nutshell, is the great underlying political question for 1972. By the recent decision of the Supreme Court, 18-21-year-olds can vote for president and for federal offices — senator and congressman. Twenty-six states — of a required 38 — have already ratified the 26th Amendment to the Constitution, which would permit 18-year-olds to vote for all state and local offices as well. The crucial question is no longer "Can they vote?" but "Where can they vote?" The answer to that question will determine — in large degree — whether they will vote.

If students are denied the right to vote where they live — at the campus — they will have to travel to another place on election day or they will have to vote by the cumbersome, time-consuming process of absentee ballot. Either way, their numbers will be sharply reduced, and the impact of the 18-21-year-old vote will be felt slightly, if at all.

Voters on Campus

In November of 1972, half the new voters will be on campus, 7 to 8 million of them. It should be noted that the congressmen from those districts are, almost without exception, conservative and hawkish. Does anyone doubt that Champaign and Carbondale, Ill., Evansville and Bloomington, Ind., Austin, Tex., Corvallis and Eugene, Ore., State College, Pa., Lawrence, Kan., Columbus, Ohio, or Westwood Calif., would not replace them with candidates more sympathetic to the politics of the students?

For that matter, what about local government? Mayors, sheriffs, city councils and tax assessors are looking grimly at the possible influx of thousands of young voters on to the rolls, most of whom, it is safe to say, have a different view of local priorities than those who have been comfortably in power?

That is why the upcoming court cases are so important. In New Jersey, a student at Seton Hall University is suing to be registered on campus. Similar suits are pending in Kentucky and Massachusetts. Not only students are involved; the decisions will affect the voting rights of migratory workers, from farmers to hardhats who move with the construction job.

At Bay

Some state authorities are prepared to go to extraordinary lengths to keep student voters at bay. Attorney-General Evelle Younger of California has issued an opinion that the young voters are somehow still "minors" and must be registered at the home of their parents, an opinion not only illegal by California law but unconstitutional.

In Michigan and Washington, legal opinions have been issued offering young voters a choice — to vote at home or at a place where work or study has given them a residence. In New York, where the 26th Amendment has not yet been ratified, a bill has been introduced to forbid students from voting at their campus location.

By 1972, the legal issues may not be entirely resolved. Organizations like Common Cause, as well as organized labor, are anxious that litigation proceed rapidly. They have good reason. There are between 17 and 25 million new voters eligible in 1972 and they will change the political map if they vote where they are.

Looking Back

From the Times of May 11, 1911:

Lohse and Stirling have so many daredevil doings in their closing act at the Grand this week that a description of them would be impossible, but they are a pair of very wonderful performers who fear neither falls nor accidents. All their doings are in mid-air and there is not a minute that is not sensational. Sadie Sherman continues the bright star of the bill, her mimicry being irresistible.

Letters

Letters will be considered for publication only if the writer is clearly identified to the editor, who may permit pen names at his discretion. Submissions will be edited and may be condensed. Short letters are favored. None will be returned.

Lotteries

The May 5 column by Scott asking for Canadian lotteries was logical and excellent; he might even have gone further and noted that here our lawmakers crawl in the most abject manner under the threat of the church vote to impose upon all Canadians a limitation upon their rights which very few of them can possibly believe in personally.—Elton Anderson, 3904 Benson.

Instead of Walking

Hard on the heels of the May 8 walkathon comes an objection; also to those walkathons that have gone before.

Certainly, I am in favor of raising money for a good cause. It is this method I would quarrel with. Surely for all these thousands of boys and girls, and men and women, there could be found something useful to do to aid a particular charity, like picking up the trash which abounds everywhere on the streets of Victoria — cans, bottles, candy wrappings, litter of any kind.

These signatures that have been solicited, usually by house-to-house canvassing, would be more readily given and a greater amount pledged, I believe, if, instead of mere miles to their credit, the competitors could be credited with a counted amount of refuse.

Another project might be obtaining the name and address of some poor unfortunate (there are a number of organizations that I feel certain would supply such names) and doing for this individual some task which he or she is unable to do, or to pay to have done. Cleaning the windows, shopping, even visiting. In short, some kindness.

Again, "meals on wheels" or the several branches of Silver Threads can always do with volunteer help.

Walking in competition, while admittedly good exercise, if not done to the point of exhaustion, does little apart from the monetary motive, than wear out shoes and give blisters to the walker.—Mrs. Gladys Couthard, 1754 Cedar Hill Cross Rd.

Not Quite Unbiased

Mr. McNelly's review of Ho by David Halberstam and his comments along with it do not seem to be an unbiased evaluation of the Vietnam War. It is true that Ho has proven an adroit leader and is undoubtedly a hero to his countrymen.

But how can Mr. McNelly talk of bombing by the Americans as "mass murder" when the Viet Cong started doing the equivalent long before, by making rocket attacks on cities and terrorizing villages? Or criticize the South Vietnamese leaders as not being democratically elected, when North Vietnam does not know democracy? (Furthermore, many governments even among the Western democracies have become somewhat authoritarian during wartime and South Vietnam has needed a strong government to lead a country which was very divided during 1964-65.)

It is to be hoped that the South Vietnamese government does become more democratic, but there are also other goals in the war, such as preventing the North Vietnamese and Communists from taking over all of Indo-China and infiltrating surrounding countries.—David Crandall, 2638 Blackwood.

They're Trying to Take the Sting Out of Death

By JANE E. BRODY

A growing league of professionals is trying to throw new light on a long-taboo subject that sooner or later touches every human being — death.

Their interest, as shown at a recent two-day conference, is neither morbid nor academic. It is intended, rather, to make dying more dignified in a day when it most often occurs in harsh institutional settings amid strangers and elaborate medical equipment. It is designed to make death less fearful in a time when fewer people believe in an afterlife.

In short, it is directed at making death easier to take for the person who dies, the professionals who attend him and the survivors who loved him.

Care of the dying patient has become increasingly important now that swift deaths from acute illnesses like pneumonia are rare and many if not most people die over months or years of chronic, degenerative diseases like cancer. Can their passing be made less dehumanizing, less psychologically painful?

Another impetus to the new interest in the subject of death has been the finding that the survivors of the deceased are far more likely than other people their age to suffer physical illness and death during the period of bereavement. Is there a way to soften the blow?

The conference in Rochester, N.Y., on "The Patient, Death and the Family," which brought together a score of experts from a wide range of disciplines, reflects the new interest in death and dying that has been evolving with increasing rapidity during the last decade.

Participants included psychologists, sociologists, philosophers, clergymen, psychiatrists, nurses and physicians who commonly treat fatally ill patients.

As demonstrated at the conference, which was sponsored by Rochester General Hospital in co-operation with the University of Rochester Medical School, the current interest in death has already resulted in a new understanding of the psychological challenges to the dying person and his family.

It has revealed, for example, that many dying patients pass through five distinct psychological stages as their death approaches. With a little help from the professionals who attend him, one expert told the conference, the dying person and his family can be guided through these stages together, making the death more acceptable and "healthier" for all concerned.

Dr. Elisabeth Kubler-Ross, then a psychiatrist at the University of Chicago, formulated the five stages theory two years ago as a result of extensive videotaped interviews with some 500 dying persons. Dr. Ross is currently medical director of the Mental Health Centre of South Cook County in Flossmoor, Ill.

The first stage is denial — "No, not me." The patient cannot accept the fact that he has a fatal illness.

In most people, Dr. Ross found, denial quickly gives way to anger and rage — the "Why me?" stage. The patient becomes hard to manage, overly critical, nasty and unco-operative. The people around him react by making visits shorter and less frequent.

Following anger, there often comes a period of bargaining — "Yes me, but . . ." "If you give me one more year, God, I promise you I'll be a good Christian."

The next stage is usually depression, a time of mourning over things already lost and of grieving over impending losses. This is when the patient psychologically separates himself from his loved ones.

Finally, the dying person enters the last stage, acceptance — "My time is very close now and it's all right." Dr. Ross said, "This is not a happy stage, but neither is it unhappy. It's devoid of feelings but it's not resignation, it's really a victory."

The psychiatrist emphasized that not all patients go through this orderly progression. Sometimes they skip stages or they return to a previous stage. And not everyone, she pointed out, wants to die in a state of acceptance.

The study of dying has also revealed the importance of honesty and openess in dealing with the dying patient, both for his sake and his family's.

Sometimes the physician recognizes the importance of dealing truthfully with his fatally ill patients but the family thwarts him.

A study several years ago found that physicians fear death more than patients do. And their training, which emphasizes the preservation of life and in most cases teaches them no more about death than how to ask the family for an autopsy, ill prepares them for dealing with the dying.

Only the Weak Survive

By DALTON CAMP

After the 1968 federal election, a Toronto newspaper asked that I compose my thoughts on the campaign which I did, and which were published under the gratuitous headline: "Why we Tories lost the election." The article yielded a tidy harvest of letters, most of it from the gentler sex, all of it outraged.

Rereading it today, I find the following sentence, "What is not known is . . . how much the nation's new leader (Mr. Trudeau) is, in the harsh, demanding life of Parliament, and in the office of Prime Minister, a leader of men."

I think we may, out of recent events, construct a theorem about political leadership. It seems to be the case that the more powerful the prime minister, to the extent that his mandate is more personal than partisan, and the more dominant his personality, which is nearly saying the same thing, the more likely that he will preside over a cabinet in which only the weakest can survive. Men of strong disposition and opinion are, the evidence suggests, unable to endure such conditions. So they quit.

Magic Accepted

There is a corollary to all this, also confirmed in recent experience, which suggests as well that Prime Ministers with populist tendencies, such as Trudeau and Diefenbaker, prefer the company of men of limited range and ambition.

With such men as colleagues, their policy decisions are less likely to be challenged and their intuitive judgments, the magic properties of all populist leaders, are more likely to be accepted. As a result, the Prime Minister's role of primus inter pares is more than a polite fiction, but becomes, in fact, an acknowledged absurdity.

In the example of the Trudeau cabinet, this is not absolutely true. Nothing in politics ever is. No one in his senses would say that Mr. Pelletier is either a weak man, or lacking in purpose, but his relationships with the Prime Minister, outside their common cabinet experience, are based upon more profound compatibilities. They are friends, and they see things alike — sharing the same notions as to priorities, of which the first is the politics of Quebec.

Other Urgencies

Obviously, among the English-speaking ministers, relationships with the Prime Minister are more tenuous and less satisfying. They enjoyed no association with Cite Libre, and they were not obsessively concerned or involved with the Duplessis, era, or its overthrow. Raised in a different school of politics, if not in life, they respond to other urgencies.

The defections from the Diefenbaker cabinet, which became, for whatever reasons, epidemic, were not unlike this beginning deterioration of the Trudeau cabinet. The resignations came mostly from those who, in the beginning, had contested the leadership of the party, as they did not come from any of those who realized they had come from those who fully agreed with the leader's priorities.

What sort of leadership is it that cannot reconcile the personalities and opinions of strong men? Obviously, both King and St. Laurent managed to do so, as Diefenbaker did not, and as Trudeau now seems unable to do. It will be remembered that Robert Winters chose not to join the Trudeau cabinet at the outset, perhaps knowing something of the futility of doing so which Paul Hellyer and Eric Kierans discovered for themselves later on.

As well, Perry Ryan left the Liberal caucus to join the Tories on the other side of the House, while Phil Givens and David Anderson are living lives of unconcealed frustration though remaining within the caucus, apparently choosing to stay and fight, rather than switch.

At the halfway point of his first term in office, the Prime Minister's ability to maintain unity in his cabinet is seriously in question, as is his capacity to tolerate and rationalize dissent among his caucus members. All this cannot merely be the consequence of disagreements over policy; one assumes that differences of opinion are common in parties as they must be in cabinets. But they do not inevitably lead to resignations.

Grasp Policies

Perhaps it is because those who have seen the most of the prime minister, such as his cabinet colleagues, and who thus have some grasp of his policies, are precisely those who can best evaluate his capacity to lead the country out of its present difficulties.

Both Paul Hellyer and Eric Kierans express strong disapproval of the government's management of the economy, which is the uncompromising, unquestioned policy of the Prime Minister. The Draconian measures, which have achieved a combination of continuing inflation and escalating unemployment, seem to be rooted in some perverse and stubborn principle which is that the more the economy is encouraged to suffer, the healthier it will one day become.

(One thinks of the eighteenth century doctors who bled their patients to cure their ills.)

Doomed to Repeat

Anyway, we can all agree that the present policy, if such it be, has done as least as much to improve the condition of the Trudeau cabinet as it has done to improve the economy of the country.

It is all reminiscent of recent history which politicians of short memory, or none at all, are doomed to repeat. Given the mishandling of the economy, the strain is felt no less in the cabinet than in the country. Individual ministerial resignations precede massive public disillusionment; the strong depart, the weak remain, and the response of government to crisis and to its daily administrative tasks becomes less coherent and more the reactions of a single man, the Prime Minister.

And as the frustrations accumulate, the power of the leader begins to wane, as does his grasp upon the country. Perhaps, before too long, John Munro will resign, or even John Turner. At which time we will all know the mandate of 1968 will have dissipated and the country will, once more, be in search of a leader.

How Love Found a Way At the Ping Pong Table

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH

SINGAPORE — To live on this swiftly developing little island on the fringe of the South China Sea is to live in a state of siege, and as the latest bijou housing estate rolls to our garden fence it is accompanied first by the menacing clatter of the bulldozer and then by the light nonsensical babble of the unhurried ping-pong ball. Our new Chinese neighbors have got the bug, one and all. But they play a ritualistic rather than punishing game.

Mae Tse-Tung has made his point. If golf is for the politicians ping-pong is for the people and Chinese of every persuasion echo him warmly. In Hong Kong last month fans waited all night outside the government stadium in order to scramble frantically for tickets when the box office opened the next morning so that they could see China's world championship team play the local talent. It is in the blood.

Sixteen years ago I visited China for the first time and in the first paragraph of the first article I wrote I found myself symbolizing the clash between old and new by describing a faded timeless temple outside Peking whose most treasured appurtenance was now a battered ping-pong table.

But I was wrong in thinking that this showed the graceless imprint of the Communist present on the Imperial past. My wife (once junior table tennis champion of Kwangtung Province) has since told me that 30 years ago the most common sight in the wings of the main hall that housed the sacred memorial tablets in a Chinese ancestral home was a ping-pong table.

Like all peoples instinctively inclined towards pleasurable excesses, the Chinese are morally very strict so that even today our illiterate 24-year-old amah (nurse-maid) may not even sit and chat it up with a young man to whom she has not been properly introduced and with whose entire background her parents are thoroughly familiar.

In pre-Communist China young people who wanted to enjoy each other's company provoked censorious comment if they met for no apparent purpose. Sport could provide a pretext but it had its drawbacks. Heterosexual basketball brought girl and boy too close and heterosexual badminton kept them too far apart.

Ping-pong provided the answer. Separated, but only by the net and the length of the green table, Yin and Yang could play, talk, joke, even flirt, with perfect propriety.

This is the inwardness of the political ping-pong story. So when Peking plays ping-pong with Mister America but poker with Mister Nixon, Mister Nixon has cause to ponder.

THEY FADE AWAY

How to cope with the ever increasing amounts of discarded packaging is a growing pollution problem for all industrialized countries. As a result, widespread research is underway to develop synthetic packaging materials that decompose after being used.

Scientists at the University of Toronto have come up with such a material, a plastic suitable for packaging food which disintegrates after being exposed to sunlight.

Chemistry Professor U. E. Gillet, describing the seven-years of research that led to the development of this plastic, says it is based on a synthesis of polymers which can be produced in sheets or cast in packing components. The plastic decomposes under ultraviolet radiation.

Ultraviolet rays, which are contained in sunlight, are mostly absorbed by window glass and curtains. As food is generally stored indoors in homes and shops, the new packaging would not be exposed to the destructive rays until the used wrapping is thrown away.

How quickly the packaging disintegrates depends on the type of polymers used. The plastic developed in Toronto takes a month to break up under ultraviolet radiation. It neither gives off smoke nor leaves a residue. All that remains after it is left out of doors is a sand-like deposit.

Dick and Brian and Bob and Murder

By RUSSELL BAKER

About midnight several days ago, a man appeared on the television screen in the cellar of our house to tell about a killing he had committed.

Everybody else in the house had gone to bed. I mention this because the odd aspect of this whole business, looking back on it, was one watcher's personal reaction to this midnight of television and, in order to convey any sense at all of the peculiarity of the thing, I have to give you a glimpse of my personal situation.

Everybody else, then, was in bed. What is curious is that it never occurred to me to race upstairs and rouse anyone. Here was a man going on in great detail right there in our cellar about this killing he had performed, yet it seemed no more worth disturbing the house for than if had been another Phyllis Diller appearance.

It was the Dick Cavett show and it has begun, as usual, with Dick's monologue, and a promise of pleasant anesthesia as Dick read off the cast of show-biz people on hand to plug their various enterprises.

Brian Bedford came first. He is in a play in New York and seemed agreeable. Agreeability is a virtue at midnight in the cellar, at least in our house, and since there is too little of it, Brian was a welcome guest.

He and Dick kept smiling, even through one rocky passage about a suicide. One felt headache and reality slinking off in defeat; one sensed the settling of the facial muscles into a fixed, fatigued smile. That smile, the cat could have told you, was a smile seen only on the best midnights down in that cellar, a smile that said, "All is, for this brief moment, right with the world."

Brian and Dick paused while several brief films were run. Most of them argued that this or that spot on the body gave off unpleasant odors and showed expensive aerosol sprays which would make the offending flesh smell like a chemistry lab. It was ridiculous stuff but amusing in a dumb way.

Then Dick was back with his next guest. He introduced Capt. Bob Marasco. The audience applauded. Down in our cellar, the pleased smile may have shown a trace of frown. Captain Marasco? The name was vaguely familiar. Was it somebody who had just made a new Andy Warhol movie?

It was not. Dick said that Captain Marasco, who lived in Bloomfield, N.J., was a former Green Beret officer who has been charged by the Army some time ago with murdering a Vietnamese man and then discharged from the service after the murder charge had been dropped.

A few days before his guest appearance with Dick, Bob had told The New York Times that he had, in fact, killed the Vietnamese in question, who he said was a triple espionage agent. Dick quickly filled in his audience on this background, and Bob, who had a lot of poise on camera, began to tell about the killing.

In the opening phase, I did not listen so much as I looked. That is the norm when you get a new personality on the talk shows. Bob appeared to be a tall, broad-shouldered, athletic young man. His clothing style was mod without being odd. "Carefully groomed" would be the cliche. A careful man, a methodical man. Perhaps even a finicky, fastidious man when it came to details. Very neat in his habits one would guess. A good worker.

Bob's account of the killing seemed to bear this out. He answered Dick's questions with details which a less fastidious man might have glossed over in his recitation. Yes, Bob said, Dick was right: two shots in the fellow's head. Of course, he had been pumped full of morphine before the shooting, which made it as humanitarian as you could possibly make something as awkward as killing a man, Bob volunteered.

Dick looked slightly aghast and held up a shampoo. Brief films were shown to sell consumer goods. This was not too dull, this talk with Bob. Would Dick cut it short to bring on Patsy Kelly, who was playing in "No, No, Nanette"?

Gosh, all the talk shows had somebody from "No, No, Nanette," but how many nights did anybody come up with a guest like Bob?

★ ★ ★

The show was back. Good! Dick was going to keep Bob talking. What do you do now for a living, he asked Bob. Bob smiled slightly, knowing he was going to get a laugh, already indicating he would rather not. He said he sold life insurance. The audience laughed. Brian, who was still there, looked white and wilted, although this may just have been a faulty video tube.

Dick asked about putting the body in a mail sack and weighting it with tire irons and dumping it from a rowboat into several hundred feet of water in the China Sea, and he asked why Bob thought the body had not been found. Bob smiled the smile of a man who knew something unpleasant and said the waters were "shark-infested."

Brian asked how Bob could possibly have done it. Bob said he had what amounted to an official execution order from the C.I.A. An order to "eliminate with extreme prejudice." Everybody who worked with the C.I.A. knew what that meant, Bob said. He had done it to serve his country, to serve us in the audience, to serve me down there in my cellar. He was not—telling it now for profit, was not making any money, in fact, from his story. He just wanted us to know what duty we were all exacting from our Army.

★ ★ ★

There was a station break. A brief film showed a liquid that did a terrific job of cleaning a toilet. By 1 a.m. Bob had begun to pall and when Dick went off I dialed with a yawn in search of an old movie. Later, going up to bed, there was a moment on the steps when the numbness lifted momentarily, and, I marveled, for just an instant, that the TV set never turned into a cobra and bit us.

Paper Mill Expansion Ruled Out—Bowaters

LIVERPOOL, N.S. (CP) — Any major capital expansion in the newsprint industry now "would not be well-timed," says M. G. Green, president of Bowaters Mersey Paper Co.

Green said in an interview the industry is always looking for ways to move ahead but under present economic conditions "we are not generating enough funds to pay for expansion."

A major blow to the export-oriented industry was the government's decision last year to allow the Canadian dollar to float on international money markets, seeking its own value in relation to other currencies.

When the Canadian dollar moved upwards in value towards partity with its U.S. counterpart, "we started losing money at the rate of $10 a ton," Green said.

An $8-per-ton price increase last year had already been used up in covering higher production costs and did not cover the loss resulting from the unpegged dollar.

"We are now in a less competitive position than we were before," Green said. He blamed the corporation tax which is higher for paper mills in Canada than in the U.S. and Sweden, "the two areas of our main competition."

Also, Canadian firms paid a duty of 17½ per cent on imported machinery while a U.S. competitor paid only a 7½ per cent duty on the same equipment.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

Consolidated

Consolidated Textile Mills Ltd., and its subsidiaries report net etrnings of $280,125 for the three months ended March 31 compared with $207,404 in the corresponding 1970 period.

Earnings per share adjusted to reflect a 5-per-cent stock dividend and three-for-one stock split were 36.5 cents compared with 27.6 in 1970.

Consumers Distrib.

A 62 per cent increase in sales to $5 million against $3 million in the quarter a year ago is reported by Consumers Distributing Co. Ltd. of Toronto.

The catalogue-showroom business had profit of $49,800 (2.46 cents a share) against $27,300 (1.35 cents), restated. First-quarter earnings usually are lower than others, especially the fourth.

Can. Superior

Canadian Superior Oil Ltd. turned a 1970 first-quarter loss into a sizeable $1.5 million profit this year.

Income totalled $10.99 million, up from $9.57 million, and expenses dropped from $9 million to $8 million, although taxes, including deferred payments, came to $1.27 million vs. $558,000 a year ago.

Net income was equal to 18 cents a share against a two-cent loss, which was based on $160,000 loss in 1970.

Wajax

Pre-tax profits were up 14.8 per cent to $341,000 in the quarter ended March 31, reports Wajax Ltd. president R. W. Chorlton, Ottawa.

Extraordinary tax reductions were available to the company in 1970, but not, apparently, in the latest period. Net income was up only marginally, from $167,000 (30 cents a share) to $171,000 (31 cents).

Inland

With a 9 per cent drop in cost of sales, Inland Chemicals Ltd. was able to show higher income on fewer gross sales last year.

The company said sales of $1.48 million in 1970 resulted in net income of $162,400 (44 cents a share) vs. $1.5 million sales and $124,490 (32 cents) in 1969.

Working capital was increased from $603,700 to $788,450.

Na-Churs

A 70 per cent increase in sales to a record $2.8 million was recorded in the first half ended March 31, in which net loss was reduced from $224,575 to $209,726, reports Na-Churs International Ltd.

Previous year's figures were restated to reflect a change in reporting last year from Canadian to U.S. currency.

President Allan L. Farrow said booked orders and deliveries are at an all-time high, and another sales record and unsurpassed earnings would be reported at year-end.

Thomson

Thomson Newspapers Ltd. reports unaudited net earnings of $3 million for the first quarter, up from $2.67 million in the same period a year earlier.

Earnings per common share for the January-March period amounted to 17.97 cents this year compared with 15.71 cents last year.

There were 15.65 million shares issued at March 31, compared with 15.45 million on the same date a year earlier.

Net sales for the quarter totalled $28.23 million this year and $25.8 million last year.

H-Bell

De-listed at Vancouver Stock Exchange after trading for more than 24 years, Highland-Bell Ltd. has become absorbed by Teck Corp. Ltd.

H-B was removed from the list last week following culmination of a deal in which the former mining company and three others were bought in an exchange of shares.

Although mainly an investment holding company of late, Vancouver-based Highland-Bell was formed in 1936 and had silver-base metals and iron mining properties in B.C., Ontario and Newfoundland.

The deal involved 1.58 million Teck B shares and letters of transmittal to shareholders will entitle them to two B for each three H-B, each six Area Mines Ltd., each six Leitch Mines Ltd., and each five Silverfields Mining Corp. Ltd.

Inland Gas

Inland Natural Gas Co. Ltd. established record high revenues for the year ended March 31.

Revenue for the period was $16 million compared with $14.8 million for the year ended March 31, 1970. Net income for last year was $2.49 million (81 cents a share) compared with $1.97 million (61 cents) the previous year.

Revenue for the nine-months ended March 31 was $13 million compared with $2.3 million for the same period in 1970.

Alcan

Alcan Aluminium Ltd. reports consolidated net income of $14.5 million U.S. or 42 cents a share in the three months ended March 30, down from $18.8 million (55 cents) in 1970.

Consolidated gross revenues from sales and all other sources were $332 million compared with $328 million. The Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd. and its subsidiaries had a net income of $9.1 million (U.S.), down from $14.4 in the first quarter of 1970.

Lockheed

Lockheed Aircraft Corp. of Canada Ltd. reports the value of its production sharing program during the first quarter of 1971 was $6.22 million.

Orders worth $1.85 million were placed with 42 Canadian firms. Of this, $933,920 was for subcontract work on the L-1011 TriStar and the remainder on the C-5 Galaxy aircraft programs.

The value of equipment manufactured by Canadian companies and installed on Lockheed aircraft was $3.9 million. The largest contract, $3.4 million, went to Leigh Instruments, Ottawa, to supply flight data recorders and crash position indicators.

Can. Delhi

Canadian Delhi Oil Ltd. earned $367,000 or 4.4 cents a share during the three months ended March 31, an increase from $241,000 or 2.9 cents a share in the first quarter of 1970.

Although gross income declined slightly to $2.35 million because of lower natural gas sales, administrative and operating expenses were also down.

Crude oil and natural gas liquids production averaged lower than 1969 by about 670 barrels a day. Gas production dropped 6 million cubic feet daily.

Are you investing for the 70's with stocks that were hot in the 60's?

A lot of investors thought their stocks would come back along with the market.

Some did.

But only the ones that were right for today's market. Which proves you can't take things like that for granted. The market now isn't just lower than it was in 1968. It's different.

For example, during the late sixties the only thing many investors seemed to care about was growth in earnings. Now we see a trend back to companies with strong balance sheets and relatively low price/earnings ratios.

So we think it's a good time for investors to take a fresh look at their portfolios. If you'd like us to help you do it, just mail the coupon with a list of your holdings.

One thing we'll watch for is stocks bought at inflated prices. In the past, speculative stocks have often dragged their feet after the first sharp rally following a severe bear market.

So don't be surprised if we tell you that some of those dear old blue chips you've been holding for years are the best things in your portfolio.

Of course our recommendations will depend on what you tell us in the coupon.

In the meantime, we'll keep looking for the trends that make the market go. We won't spot them all. Nobody does. But we do have twice as many analysts looking for them as any other broker.

BILL WALKER

The weekend in review, and if Chicago coach Billy Reay is unhappy about the refereeing in the Stanley Cup final series with Montreal Canadiens, what about coach Frank Grealy of Victoria United?

It wasn't the penalties that were called that bothered Reay Sunday as the Hawks lost to the Canadiens. It was the ones that were missed. Reay claimed that Pete Mahovlich should have been penalized for hooking when he yanked Keith Magnuson out of the way and then slapped the puck behind Tony Esposito for the first Montreal goal. But there it was on the video box, and if referee John Ashley missed it, that alone didn't beat the Hawks. The Habs were full value for the victory, and if they continue Sunday's trend, skate, skate, skate, and shoot, shoot, shoot, they could make it more than interesting for the Hawks.

Meanwhile, history has now recorded the NHL's longest season. In no other year has a game been played after May 11.

Meanwhile, in Vancouver, the milk of human kindness wasn't being showered on Victoria United. Or by them. Matched with Eintracht Saturday, United had to win to have a chance at first place in the Coast League. They didn't, tied Eintracht, 3-3, and later lost the league title to Columbus, who finished Sunday with a 3-0 win over Pauls. By two points, Columbus won out. But if a victory Saturday wouldn't have done them any good after all, United seemingly had every right to otherwise complain.

●

Linesman Jim Miller was the particular object of their scorn. Besides being a "poor official" in the opinion of Grealy, Miller was cited for swearing at one of the United players, Ray Telford, and for antagonizing another, Brian Robinson.

"We don't think Miller has done a good job this year," Grealy explained, "and earlier we requested the league not to have him officiating at our games."

"This was verbal," Grealy said of the request.

Then he alluded to a rather strange series of events that had occurred when Miller had refereed.

"In every game we had a penalty called against us," Grealy said: "In one game we had two." If any of the penalties were deserved, Grealy admitted that one call definitely was correct. He wouldn't pass similar judgment on the others.

"On Saturday, Miller openly antagonized Robinson," Grealy declared. He explained that when a controversial penalty had been called against United for hands by referee Gerry Mulziva (after consultation with Miller, no less), Miller in effect said to Robinson:

"They'll score on the penalty and then get another goal to tie it, and maybe even beat you."

●

"An official has no right to talk to a player in this manner," Grealy declared. "The swearing at players by Miller is not new," he added.

Which is the basis of the United complaint, and although the game decision will undoubtedly stand, it is understandable that United should be displeased.

United president Harry Rose was equally incensed, and although he may be cited himself for remarks that, if long overdue, certainly set the tone of the deep feeling within the club.

"In fairness to soccer, we have tried to deny the accusations that the Coast League is 'bush', but in view of the officiating in the last few games, culminated by the display today, it appears there is no way that Vancouver referees will allow a Victoria team to win as a result of borderline decisions. . . ."

A serious charge, by Rose, but Grealy emphasized it. "There were so many calls going against us," he said, "that once when a call was made in our favor, we all applauded, on the bench. We didn't say anything, we just applauded."

"Sure, we were ridiculing the official," he admitted. "that's why we got bounced into the stands."

●

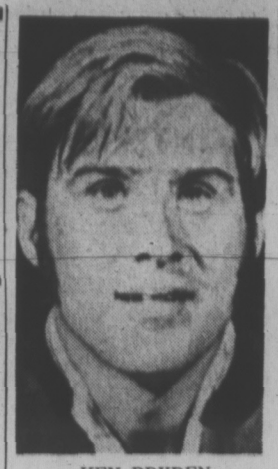
And regardless of the decision in that other fuss, the Victoria United protest of the fact that suspended Columbus coach John Milner was sitting on the bench during the 0-0 tie with United two weeks ago there also is a discrepancy in reports on why that protest hadn't been acted upon sooner.

"That protest," said Grealy, "was given to the B.C. Soccer Commission on the Monday following the game. It must be submitted within 48 hours. The Commission told us that it had been promptly passed on to the Coast League for action, but Coast League officials say they didn't receive it until last week and thus didn't have time to act."

Which is like saying that someone isn't telling the whole truth.

And if it is unfortunate that the season should be ending on such an acrimonious note of dispute, protest, and indecision, the seriousness of the charges by United cannot be allowed to pass either. They must be acted upon, or refuted.

It will be interesting to see which.



KEN DRYDEN
. . . Habs not surprised

FOURTH GAME TONIGHT . . .

. . . CHANGES UNLIKELY

Dryden Stands Up to Pressure

MONTREAL (CP) — The fact goaltender Ken Dryden has surmounted the pressures of National Hockey League playoffs comes as no surprise to Jean Beliveau.

The veteran Montreal Canadiens' captain said Monday credit for Dryden's arrival belongs to former coach Claude Ruel, who first noticed the 23-year-old Toronto native playing college hockey three or four years ago.

"He (Ruel) told me about three, maybe four years ago that he wanted me to see this player," recalled Beliveau. "He said you're 'gonna see a good goalie.'"

History has borne out Ruel's prediction.

Dryden has taken the regular goaltending chores away from Rogatien Vachon and Phil Myre and has been instrumental in the Canadiens' Stanley Cup drive.

Although coach Al MacNeil rarely, if ever, discloses his starting goaltenders for future games, it's unlikely he'll part from the pattern that has proved so successful in the post-season play when the Canadiens meet Chicago Black Hawks here tonight in the fourth game of the best-of-seven series. The nationally-televised game starts at 5 p.m. P.D.T.

In the three games with Chicago, including the two opening losses in the Windy City, prior to Sunday's 4-2 win at home, the former all-American at Cornell University had been among the Habs' most consistent performers.

It is the second time in three years Canadiens have gone with a rookie goaltender in the playoffs. Two years ago, it was Vachon replacing veteran Gump Worsley.

With Vachon, Beliveau added, "we have good reserve . . . and in a long series this could play an important part."

Goaltending has been the key in the three games of the series to date with Tony Esposito, Dryden's counterpart in the Chicago goal, performing equally as well.

Injuries have not been a determining factor in the final.

Chicago's Pit Martin appears to have recovered from an earlier leg injury and took a regular shift in Sunday's game. Hawk defenceman Pat Stapleton, victim of a severe skate cut on the cheek in the second game, played as usual Sunday with no visible effects.

Montreal's rugged John Ferguson, who missed the final game of the Minnesota series and the first game against Chicago with a hip injury, was back at his boisterous best Sunday.

Rustlers Win Second Tier Championship

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Red Deer Rustlers capitalized on defensive mistakes of Charlottetown Islanders Monday night, trouncing the eastern junior champions 7-4 to win the Centennial Cup for Alberta.

The Rustlers, winners of the western tier two championship, won the best-of-seven final series 4-2.

It was a disappointing end to the series for the Islanders, who outplayed the Rustlers from the opening face-off and outshot them 43-25.

Telford Invited To Camp

VANCOUVER — Ray Telford, left back for Victoria United, was among an eight-player contingent chosen from the Pacific Coast Soccer League to try out for the Canadian Pan-American and Olympic Games teams beginning May 15 at Camp Borden, Ont.

The tryout camp will screen 40 players from all parts of Canada.

Three of the eight players were picked from Vancouver Columbus — goalkeeper Peter Greco, halfback Sam Lenarduzzi and forward Sergio Zanatta. Greco and Lenarduzzi played on the national team in the 1967 Pan-Am Games in Winnipeg and Greco was also on Canada's World Cup squad during the 1968 elimination rounds.

Others picked from the PCSL were Billy Young of Pauls Canadians, Buzz Parsons of Eintracht, Len Brown of Croatia and Gary Thompson of UBC Thunderbirds.

Canada's first game in the Olympic Games elimination series will be played May 30 in Bermuda.

Ellis Moves Up a Notch, Chuvalo Slips Downhill

TORONTO (CP) — Jimmy Ellis wants just a little time to rest up before resuming his quest for the world heavyweight boxing championship while a beaten George Chuvalo just wants some time to plan his future.

Ellis, 30, former World Boxing Association champ, moved back into contention for the title Monday when he won a decision over the Canadian champion in a 10-rounder at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Ellis would like another shot at Joe Frazier of Philadelphia who beat him for the WBA title a little more than a year ago.

"This fight is gonna put me in real good shape for him," said Ellis, who may have to wait a while. Frazier has a rematch scheduled with Muhammad Ali whom he beat last March in New York.

Where does the 33-year-old Chuvalo go from here?

"I don't know," said the Toronto fighter. "I just don't know right now. I'll have to think about it."

The fight here was one of three in a closed-circuit television hookup with Chicago and Oakland.

ELLIS FASTER

Ellis went into the fight almost 28 pounds lighter than Chuvalo and proved much faster. His hard rights to the head had Chuvalo bleeding early in the second round.

Terrell, 32, also a former WBA champion, joined Ellis in a bid to regain the crown after he used his long left jab to hold off Pires for his fifth successive win on the comeback trail.

Terrell, six-foot-six, weighed 219, four more than Pires, a part-time cab driver and policeman from Sao Paulo.

Despite his size, the Chicago fighter was unable to follow through on his jabs and often resorted to clinching when Pires threatened.

Foreman, ranked No. 1 contender for Frazier's title, sent Peralta into the ropes with a hard flurry of punches in the 10th round of the scheduled 15-rounder at Oakland.

There were no knockdowns in the fight.

Royals Smash Jinx; Mets Master Hex

By The Associated Press

Kansas City Royals have obviously said "scram" to the Baltimore Orioles' jinx over them while New York Mets caught up with Houston Astros' Wade Blasingame just as he was about to count 10 and out.

After losing 23 straight games to the Orioles the last two years, Kansas City made it three out of four over Baltimore this season with a 4-1 victory Monday night behind the slugging of Amos Otis and Bruce Dal Canton's five-hit pitching.

The Mets had never beaten Blasingame and were in danger of dropping their 10th in a row to the Astros' left-hander until Bud Harrelson singled home two runs in the seventh inning for a 2-1 triumph.

Elsewhere on Monday's slim major league slate, San Francisco Giants and Juan Marichal edged Cincinnati Reds 3-2, Ferguson Jenkins of Chicago Cubs struck out 12 and became the National League's first six-game winner by blanking Philadelphia Phillies 3-0, St. Louis Cardinals whipped Montreal Expos 8-5 and Detroit Tigers downed California Angels 5-2.

Dal Canton and loser Dave McNally were locked in a scoreless battle with two out in the fifth inning when the Royals took a 1-0 lead in singles by Freddie Patek, Cookie Rojas and Otis, who earlier singled and doubled. Otis then homered in the seventh following Jerry May's double and a walk.

DROPS FLY

Baltimore's only run came in the eighth and was unearned when left fielder Carl Taylor dropped a two-out fly ball with a runner on second.

Blasingame had protected a 1-0 lead on singles by Bob Watson and Denis Menke and a double-play grounder from the second inning until the seventh when Jerry Grote, who broke up a no-hit bid in the fifth, lashed a one-out double.

Don Hahn got an infield hit and took second on Tommie Agee's tap in front of the plate, with Grote holding third. Harrelson then drilled his decisive hit to centre field.

Marichal, who recorded his 2,000th career strikeout, held the Reds to one hit until the sixth when Pete Rose singled and Tony Perez homered. However, by that time, the Giants had all their runs with Willie Mays, Ken Henderson and Tito Fuentes getting the runs batted in.

Adanacs to Test Shamrocks Here

Occupational hazards of different sorts cost Victoria Shamrocks two players for their Western Lacrosse Association meeting with Coquitlam Adanacs in Memorial Arena.

Dennis Somner has been "shipped out of town" by his employer for 10 days and will miss a total of five games.

Charn Dhillon will also be missing from Wednesday's line-up after pulling a back muscle at work late last week.

Following the 8 p.m. encounter with Adanacs, Shamrocks will embark on a three-game "away" series — visiting Coquitlam on Saturday, New Westminster Salmonbellies on May 20 and Vancouver Burrards on May 25.

League Rules Out United's Protest

Victoria United officials learned Monday night that their protest following a Pacific Coast Soccer League match on April 24 had been ruled "null and void" by the PCSL executive.

A protest was filed concerning Columbus player-coach John Milner, still serving a 12-game suspension for striking a referee, who sat on the Columbus bench throughout the game.

It was rejected by the executive on the grounds that the protest was sent to the B.C. Soccer Commission and not to the PCSL as well, as stipulated in the constitution.

United officials sent it directly to the BCSC because the 12-game suspension was handed out by that body.

The Victoria club now plans an appeal to the B.C. Soccer Commission since the episode has become a "matter of principle." And if satisfaction is not obtained there, they will appeal to the Canadian Soccer Commission.

United also received "good" news on Monday.

Their sudden-death PCSL playoff semi-final against a yet-to-be-decided opponent will be held on home turf at Royal Athletic Park on May 24 at 2 p.m.

MacCaskell, Baxter Power Langford Club

Ken MacCaskell and Tom Baxter took different routes but contributed most of the punch to spark Langford Drywall's 6-5 victory over William Head Steelers in a Stuffy McGinnis Major Men's Softball League game Monday night at Heywood Avenue Park.

MacCaskell connected for three singles in three trips to the plate, driving in two runs. Baxter, on the other hand, cracked a two-run homer in the second inning.

Terry Hamilton led off Langford's four-run fourth inning with a double and later crossed the plate on a single by Duane Bertrand. Baxter's homer, which scored Rocky Tyler, came after two were out.

John Martin drove in two runs for Steelers.

New Boating Group Offers Useful Services

Four Victoria men, determined to give boaters a better break, have started an organization that has grown like Topsy in its first few weeks.

The B.C. Boat Association has a membership in the hundreds and a chat with former navy commander Alex Kilpatrick soon shows why this is so.

Take, as an example, insurance. Anyone who has shopped around for marine insurance knows that this is an area where rates and coverage vary so much you can end up paying hundreds of dollars more than necessary. This group, once you're a member, will get you quotes after some pretty selective shopping around. They'll also provide you with free legal advice if you get into any sort of hassle while afloat.

For the price of three packages of cigarettes, members can get personal boating accident insurance that will pay off to the tune of $250 if you have a dental mishap with a boom or other boating gear, give $1,500 for blanket medical, the same amount for dismemberment and also for accidental death.

The BCBA will also help members plan their cruises, get them the charts they'll need, and sponsor correspondence courses in piloting, celestial navigation, boating and seamanship, and meteorology.

Boat brokers might not exactly jump for joy at the BCBA's free classified listing of members who wish to buy, sell, trade boats and equipment. But what middleman would?

★ ★ ★

The "old hands" at the boating game will be given a chance to give their tips to others through BCBA's monthly bulletins. The BCBA also intends to order gear, based on members' suggestions, and, through bulk buying, reduce the costs by about one third.

They also hope to save members 15 per cent on boating books and magazine subscriptions.

One of the main objectives, apart from all these, is to pressure government departments and officials to provide more adequate protection and rescue facilities.

They're also aware that a boater is in no position to scream unless he, himself, does his bit by getting good safety equipment and more than a smattering of basic seamanship under his belt.

This is an organization that bears watching. It could well end up in a leading role on the waterfront. The BCBA's office is at 819 Fort, the phone number is 386-6124.

This was an action-packed weekend for the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

The Cal 20 fleet held its championships, four races being sailed by 10 boats. Mike Fraser's Windless emerged as the queen of all and winning the Max Young Trophy.

Club eliminations were held for the O'Day single-handed international championships. These were won by Doug Beer, who will take on the rest of Vancouver Island at the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, on June 6.

Thirteen of the club's cruising class boats had an overnight race across the Strait of Juan de Fuca and back, beginning at 5 p.m. Saturday. First boat home Sunday at 4.23 a.m. was Don Lawson's Cubara. On corrected time she ended up in fourth position.

The smallest boat out there, Jack Woodward's Cal 25 Puff, lost top laurels by a bare one minute four seconds to Guy Screech's Morgan. In third place was Steve Merriman's Vandal.

TEE TOPICS

By Ernie Fedoruk

Bill Wakeham and Norm Boden both sense an added urgency in their efforts to close in on the Times Vancouver Island Open golf championship.

In days to come, not far away, both are ticketed to hang up their professional's shingle on new shops. There could be added glamour if one could greet new customers as the 1971 Island Open champion.

Boden is scheduled to officially open his Marsh Meadows course, near Honeymoon Bay, this Saturday. Ribbon-snipping at 1 p.m., and some golf to follow.

Wakeham makes his move June 1 when he officially takes over from Mel Evans as resident professional at Cowichan. In the interim, Wakeham heads up Cowichan's greens-keeping staff.

If they can get by next Sunday's semi-final rivals at Uplands, the Island Open final would be an all-Cowichan affair. Boden plays Reg Clarkson and Wakeham will get acquainted with Bob Beauchemin in the semi-finals.

The Wakeham-Beauchemin match looms as the big one. It brings together the 16-year-old medallist against an ex-tourist and two-time Island champion. And it will be up to Wakeham to preserve a distinction he holds.

Wakeham is the only one to win The Daily Times Trophy while still a junior. He accomplished that with his 1959 triumph, when he was 18.

Beauchemin, who will turn 17 on May 19, threatens to become a younger champion.

Wakeham is very much aware of the threat. Esepcially, he says, "if I don't start playing better than I have been."

* * *

The Vancouver City match-play championship will be an amateur-vs-pro final after John Russell and Ron Willey cleared semi-final obstacles Sunday.

Russell, the veteran Point Grey amateur, two down after five holes, defeated McCleery's Bert Ticehurst 2 and 1 while Willey, the Marine Drive pro, sidelined Jack Westover of Lions Golf Centre 3 and 2.

Russell produced some sensational putting to drop Ticehurst. After losing the fifth, when he hit two balls out of bounds, Russell one-putted six of the next seven greens to take a three-hole lead.

* * *

Willey, incidentally, is among a flock of Vancouver golfers who have filed entries for the Cedar Hill Open May 29-30. Bob Cox, Doug Reid and Mike Graas are others while Boden, Wakeham and Vaughan Trapp are "in" from the Island.

In the meantime, many of B.C.'s pros will head for Euguene and the $20,000 Payless Classic which starts Thursday. Trapp and John Morgan of Victoria left Monday for Eugene but Glen Meadows' pro Dick Silverberg had to change his travelling plans.

Tournament officials advised Silverberg that his entry had been received too late, and they're observing the limit of 196.

SHORT CHIPS: Chuck McBey won low gross honors with an eight-over-par 80 and Cliff Green, 82-10—72, captured net honors in Glen Meadows' monthly medal round . . . Walt Spaven captured the Cedar Hill senior's crown with a 72-10—62 Sunday . . . and Uplands' Arthur Thompson continues to be a marvel . . . Cedar Hill teams fared well in the recent pro-directors' tournament at Quilchena . . . the team of Ron Cush, Spaven, Norm Haskell and Bob Alexander scored a net 60, 12 under par, to finish third . . . Bill Goldsworthy's team with Kurt Lampert, Ray Saxon and Ron Giffis finished fifth with a 62 . . . Bill Wright's Museum team won the event with a 14-under 58 . . .

Gorge Vale's Leo Derman is trying to contact all caddies from the pre-Second World War era . . . The pre-war bag-toters are staging a play-and-feed affair at Gorge Vale June 18 . . . The Hawk, Frank Wakeham, Bob and Walt Spaven, Bill McColl, and others . . . Entries are now being accepted for both the City Junior (at Oak Bay May 29) and the City Amateur (at Gorge June 6 and at Glen Meadows June 13) . . . The amateur field will be limited to 99, based on lowest handicaps . . .

* * *

And finally, Fred Metzger's friends are breaking their backs in an effort to split Irish Sweepstakes tickets with the Cedar Hill golfer . . . It looks like he may be headed for a big year . . . He slammed down his first 29-hand (the perfect one) in a crib game about a month ago . . Last week he put his tee shot off the 185-yard fourth at Cedar Hill to within 30 inches of the hole . . . Fred canned the putt for a birdie two . . . On the next hole, he sank a 135-yard approach shot for an eagle two . . .

GUEST CELEBRITY at third annual B.C. Sport Hall of Fame "Banquet of Champions" at Hotel Vancouver on June 1 will be hockey superstar Bobby Orr (above). Another feature guest will be English comedian Tommy Trinder, who is chairman of Fulham Football Club. Tickets for mixed (ladies invited) banquet are now on sale ($25 each) at ticket office of B.C. Lions, 550 Burrard St., Vancouver (681-5441).

Mt. Douglas Bids For Four Straight

Mount Douglas, which has won the Greater Victoria high school track and field championship for the past three years, shifted into high gear in its campaign to retain the title during the opening round of heats Monday at Centennial Stadium.

The defending champions placed 21 qualifiers from five boys' and five girls' heats, including an all-important 14 in the "A" section, into the finals.

During the finals Friday, the point count will be broken down 15-15-7-6-5-4½ for individual events and 20-15-12-10-9-8 for relays in the "A" section and 4 2½-2-1½-1-½ for individual and 7-5-4-3-2-1 for relays in the "B" section.

Oak Bay, runnerup to Mount Douglas in 1970, placed second Monday in the total number of qualifiers (17) and "A" flight entries (10).

Results of the opening heats were also pleasing to coach Jack Lusk of Reynolds, the host school this year, which finished a distant last in its first season of 1970.

Reynolds matched its 1970 qualifying total of 10 on the first night and doubled its "A" total with four athletes in the lienup.

Belmont, new to the meet this year, managed three "A" qualifiers and 13 overall.

Close competition was the order of the night Monday, but it was never so close as in the boys' 100-metre dash which requires two runoffs tonight at 4:45.

Brad Yakubowich and Don Nemeth of Mount Douglas finished one-two in 11.1 and 11.5 seconds, respectively, but after that it was a log-jam and placing in heats was necessary to break ties.

Leon Mitchell of Reynolds, Mike Smith of Mount View and Robert Hume of Mount Douglas drew in aat 11.6 but Matt Flynn of Victoria and Steve Hunter of Belmont, both in a group at 11.7, will have to run again for an "A" berth.

Brian Doucette of Esquimalt and Duff McCaghey of Oak Bay will be battling for the remaining "B" berth.

Trials continue between 3:30 and 5:30 today and Wednesay with Friday's finals set to start at 10 a.m.

Big innings enabled Molsons to cruise to their victories. Vancouver erupted for eight runs in the second inning of the first game, then cut loose with a six-run splurge in the fifth inning of the nightcap.

CAHA Sets Plan To Erase Deficit

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association's board of directors has decided to charge any person playing under a CAHA card $1 in an effort to lift the association out of debt.

CAHA president Earl Dawson said the CAHA had averaged losses of $23,000 in each of the last three years. He said 50 per cent of the money collected through the new levy would be returned to the provincial body that raised it.

Roller Hockey

Wilkin Sparkles As Bates Tripped

Barry Wilkin says you don't have to be a gorilla to be a winner.

One of the smallest pitchers in the Major Men's Softball League, Wilkin reared back Monday to throw a three-hitter for Seaboard Construction and tag Bate's Construction with its first setback of the season, 2-1.

Wilkin, who relies on control rather than an overpowering fastball, was at his pin-point best. He didn't walk a batter and struck out six.

TWO HITS

Wilkin also set up Seaboard's winning run in the top of the final inning. He banged a two-out single—his second hit of the night—and advanced to second on a wild pitch.

Forlund scored Seaboard's first run in the first inning, leading off with a single and completing the circuit on a wild pitch, infield out and a fielder's choice.

Morris won a 107-mile race in Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, on Saturday by edging Calgarians Kevin Sirois and Hank Koning. Larry Lorne of Victoria placed fourth.

On Sunday, Morris moved to Spokane and won a 50-mile jaunt to edge clubmate Ross Darnell and Koning.

'Prison Worse Than Solitary;' Sentence Cut

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice John Brooke Monday reduced the sentence of a Cree Indian convicted of manslaughter, saying that solitary confinement would not produce a loneliness equal to that of a prisoner locked up with men who do not speak his language.

The Ontario Court of Appeal judge reduced a 10-year sentence imposed on Gabriel Fireman to two years. Fireman was sentenced Nov. 19, 1969 after pleading guilty to manslaughter in the shooting death of his 23-year-old cousin, Eli Fireman.

"I think his imprisonment would produce a loneliness that would be greater than that in isolation," said Mr. Justice Brooke. "He can speak no English. How frustrating his existence, when all those around him do not speak his language nor he theirs."

The shooting occurred July 30, 1969 at an isolated Cree settlement on the shores of the Attawapiskat River, on the west shore of James Bay about 140 air miles northwest of Moosonee.

When relatives ordered a large shipment of liquor, the Fireman cousins were among those who began drinking. About 12 hours later both men were drunk and the shooting took place, for no apparent reason.

"When he killed his cousin the people were shocked and rejected him," said Mr. Justice Brooke. "He remained ostracized. He was detained by the people and turned over to the police when they arrived.

"It was only after he had taken communion at their church that his family would look upon him."

The appeal court judge noted that Gabriel Fireman, 27, was a good trapper but had only finished the equivalent of Grade 5 in school.

"The settlement is remote. Police visit the area rarely, as there are few calls for their services. In 30 years there were no instances of major crimes there.

"He lived in a community where time is told only in seasons. His sentence of 10 years is something he is not likely to understand fully, for he is unfamiliar with the calendar measurement of time in terms of days, weeks, months or years."

For the rest of the Attawapiskat Cree community, the lesson lies in the fact that "this unsophisticated man of previously good character was sent to prison for his crime, and surely it is not dependent on the magnitude of the sentence for its value," said Mr. Justice Brooke.

"What is important in these circumstances is that to the whole community justice appears to have been done and that there is respect for the law.

"This is best accomplished if he is returned to society before time makes him a stranger and impairs his ability to live there with some dignity," the judge said.

"The appellant (Fireman) has not by his previous conduct indicated that he is a dangerous person from whom society must be protected. Frankly, I think it is doubtful that prison is the answer.

"But that is our way."

Greeks Prepare Plan

ATHENS (Reuter) — Nicholas Makarezos, Greek minister of co-ordination, said the government is preparing a new five-year plan to run from 1973 to 1977. Greece's deficit in 1970 reached $1.083 billion, official Bank of Greece figures show.

BRIAN HOLLEY FIAT

3319 DOUGLAS AT CLOVERDALE, VICTORIA

The original Italian sports car.

Tough, because it was ruggedly built.

So in honour of our famous ancestors, Fiat introduces the new Fiat 128. With front wheel drive.

Of course, we've added our own touches to the tradition.

To do the pulling, we hooked up one of the most rugged 1,116 cc. engines ever made. The chief designer was Aurelio Lampredi, who designed engines for Ferrari when Ferrari was at the top of the Grand Prix circuit.

This little powerhouse accelerates fast, has lots of torque at low speeds, and can drive full out hour after hour. It's all in the design. Such things as a five-bearing crankshaft, overhead cam and Weber carburetor.

Then we added independent four-wheel suspension, based on the simple MacPherson strut principle plus anti-roll bar. This new suspension, combined with the front wheel drive, and rack-and-pinion steering, lets the new Fiat 128 take corners ten miles an hour faster than it ought to. And still tuck in and hold you steady right around.

Then we added front disc brakes, plus a proportioning valve to keep the rear wheels from locking and to give you more control when you have to brake fast. We also added radial tires as standard equipment.

For the people who ride in our little chariot, we built in more room, more sturdiness, and more comfort. In three body styles. Two door. Four door. And station wagon. The passenger and luggage space inside the new Fiat 128 represents 80% of the total space. All the engine and mechanical components are packed into only 20%.

And because it is so big inside, and the floor is flat throughout, the new Fiat 128 will hold four good-sized adults. Comfortably.

Finally the trunk is 13 cubic feet big. Because the differential and the spare tire are up front.

But it's still the spirit of that original Italian sports car that makes the new Fiat 128 the tough, sure-footed little vehicle it is to-day.

Just drive one and feel it for yourself.

And ask your dealer about the Fiat Overseas Delivery Plan.

The new Fiat 128

Battle Over Proposed Ice Arena Shapes Up in Saanich

By ROGER STONEBANKS

A battle is in the wind in Saanich between those who link fun with ice and those who don't.

The Cedar Hill recreation study committee recommended Monday that an ice surface be built in the area, but the project is expected to become an issue when it comes before Saanich council for a decision.

The committee's recommendation was unanimous, with chairman Ald. Alan Newberry, Ald. William Campbell and Ald. Leslie Passmore casting the yes votes.

Before they left the meeting, Ald. William Noel also said he favors an ice surface but Mayor Hugh Curtis supported a multi-use community centre and Ald. Frank Waring said the committee should consider such a centre.

LIGHT MANNER

Two citizen representatives on the committee (two others didn't attend) disagreed with the recommendation, for different reasons, although they have no vote.

Norm Zaph said he doesn't favor any particular project but wants to evaluate all suggestions.

"I am terribly concerned at the light manner we are deciding this," he said. "It is an inconceivable decision to me."

He said the citizen members of the committee hadn't had time to study briefs from the public, although they were read at the start of Monday's meeting.

Mrs. Louise Mason said later she favors a community centre, at the south end of Cedar Hill Park.

She said an ice-surface will "cater to an awfully small segment of the population, the kids."

Curtis, in support of a community centre, said the Saanich-commissioned Sanderson recreation report said the next project should be a community centre, and the Colwood arena, soon to be built, will reduce pressure on other rinks.

Passmore said there is a definite need for an ice surface, which could also be used for lacrosse in the summer. Players were being turned away because of lack of facilities, he said.

"I agree it would get more use and serve more people than any other facility," said Campbell.

Saanich indoor recreation manager Bill Young gave some rough figures for various facilities: An ice surface would cost $300,000 to $500,000 although a bare-bones rink might cost $260,000 to $275,000; a gymnasium-community centre would be $250,000 to $260,000; and a swimming pool $300,000 to $400,000.

He also said he has noticed "a real demand" for a building with a large floor area for social events and it was one request Saanich hasn't answered. On the other hand, Saanich could build a rink or a pool and fill it.

The 1967 recreation referendum provided $260,000 for a community centre at the McRae property, now known as Cedar Hill Park. The referendum did not specify details of a community centre.

Three earlier projects under this referendum are the G.R. Pearkes Arena, Saanich Senior Citizens Activity Centre and Gordon Head Recreation Centre.

The Cedar Hill recreation study committee, which held a public meeting on the project March 5, also recommended that the firm of Peterson and Lester be appointed architects for the project. This firm designed the Gordon Head Recreation Centre.

It was pointed out that funds for acquiring a privately-owned site would have to come from $260,000 set aside for the project, reducing what some considered was already a small enough amount of money. This would appear to narrow the choice of site to Cedar Hill Park.

BROADMEAD SUBDIVISION

Only Sewers Hold Back Project

Saanich council Monday night declared the 713-acre Broadmead subdivision in the Royal Oak district a development area under the Municipal Act.

But on the key question of extending sanitary sewers, council agreed to refer this back to public works committee.

The decisions followed presentation of the proposed subdivision, a small part of which has already begun.

Ultimately, over the next 15 or 20 years, Broadmead will develop as a residential area of 8,500 persons in houses and apartments, as well as a large shopping centre adjacent to the Patricia Bay Highway, several schools and parks.

The proposal shown by Broadmead Farms Ltd. envisaged 2,505 units of accommodation, including 1,086 units of two- and four-storey garden apartments, 343 units of townhousing, 257 units of six- and eight-storey apartments, 39 patio houses — and 780 single-family dwellings.

Cost of the residential part of the subdivision was given as $77.1 million.

The Broadmeade Shopping Centre would include 600,000 square feet of buildings on 33.25 acres and cost $13.1 million. Hudson's Bay Company has purchased a major interest in the 33.25 acres and will have a department store there, as announced earlier.

Broadmead Farms Ltd. said the total development represents a $92 million "investment in Saanich."

Representatives of he company — Gordon Rolston, Ted Henderson and Fred Russell — sought answers from council on approval of the over-all concept and extension of sewers.

Council showed no dissent on approving the 713 acres as a development area under the Municipal Act. They said this was a logical and natural move.

NO HEARING

Municipal planner Tom Loney said councils can create development areas without a public hearing, after which there are negotiations for land-use contract for the various phases of the project.

Once such a contract is negotiated between the council and developer, then the contract goes to a public hearing.

Ald. Alan Newberry said this change in the legislation, earlier this year, gives municipalities design control.

On sewers, the Broadmead property lies outside the sewerage enterprise area — the currently-sewered land and the adjacent area to which sewers now are being extended.

Municipal engineer Neville Life said he sees no reason why sewering of the adjacent lands, 3,400 acres, should not be finished by the end of 1972.

EXTENSION

Extension of sewers beyond this area is a matter of policy, he said. There is the question of finding the $1.3 million construction cost and accepting an increase in the per-parcel sewer charge.

From an engineering point of view, he said he would like to wait to mid-1973.

Figures were presented to council which Life stressed are approximate, based upon projections and do not include regional trunk costs or maintenance.

These figures showed the annual debt charges within the sewerage enterprise area will be $946,300 in 1973 and would increase by $148,500 if sewers are taken to Broadmead commercial and residential areas, Christmas Hill-Beckwith and Royal Oak.

The per-parcel charge was shown as $60.70 a year in 1973 for existing sewered lands, increasing to $67.80 if the extensions occurred.

SEPTIC TANKS

Fred Russell, a director of Broadmead Farms Ltd. which bought the 713 acres in 1965 for an undisclosed price from Rithet Consolidated, said the subdivision has been installing sewer pipes in anticipation of connections. In the meantime, septic tanks have to be used.

He referred to previous meeting the company has had with Saanich, one with council last July and another with public works committee last December. Both were closed.

"The time has come when we have to move Broadmead to a more economic stage of development," he said. It is a matter of "urgency."

With approval of the development area and extension of sewers, he said Broadmead "will be in a position to move ahead more rapidly with the total project and, hopefully, sustan the schedules of development outlined in this presentation."

These timetables show a steady continuation of single-family house construction, building of the first apartments in 1973, first phase of the shopping centre in 1973 and completion in 1978.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

France To Test Oil Licker

Twenty tons of oil will be dumped in a French harbor to test the efficiency of the slicklicker, developed by the Victoria firm of R.B.H. Cybernetics, Patents and Processes Ltd.

Company president V. N. R. Sewell, who has just returned from visiting England, France, Denmark and Sweden, says the test has been ordered by France's marine department.

The magnitude of the dumping is because officials feel a smaller amount would not give convincing proof of the machine's oil pick-up capabilities.

Sewell says that governments of all European countries are concerned about the biological dangers involved in using emulsifiers to combat oil spills. He asserts that there is growing evidence that emulsifiers force the cancer-causing factors in oil to enter the food chain."

Seven Firms Increase Price

PITTSBURGH (AP) — National Steel Corp. today became the seventh major steel producer to match the 6¼-per-cent price increase announced last week by U.S. Steel Corp. on products used in autos and appliances.

Increases on most of the sheet and strip products take effect June 16, a spokesman for National, fourth largest producer in the U.S., said.

U.S. Steel the industry giant, announced the increases last Wednesday. Armco, Jones and Laughlin and Republic were the first to follow suit.

On Friday, Bethlehem, the second largest producer, matched the increase and was followed by Inland and Kaiser.

CP Rail Places Coal Car Order

MONTREAL (CP) — CP Rail has placed a $7.5 million order with Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd. for 410 steel gondola cars.

The 100-ton capacity cars, described as a "bathtub type," will carry coal in Western Canada, mainly between the Fording Coal Ltd. mine, 30 miles north of Natal, and the Roberts Bank port near Vancouver.

Noranda First to Form U.K. Metals Link

LONDON (CP5 — Noranda Mines Ltd. of Canada has joined forces with a British group in a new company which will conduct broking business on the London Metal Exchange and international commodity markets.

The move is arousing considerable comment, with one newspaper terming it the first time a North American company has linked up in this way with an organization already represented on the metal exchange.

The British firm is Rudolf Wolff and Co., one of the largest metal and commodity-trading companies in London. Wolff has an estimated annual turnover of £2 billion ($5 billion).

The firm has dissolved its partnership and become a limited-liability organization under virtually the same name, Rudolf Wolff and Co. Ltd., with Noranda Mines taking a reported 50-per-cent interest.

Four Wolff directors and four from the Canadian groups will sit on the new firm's board, with the paid-up capital to be £500,000.

"The brokerage business will continue to be run by the Rudolf Wolff management team," a statement announcing the company's formation said.

"Noranda is the first North American producer to join with an LME firm," comments The Financial Times today.

The Financial Times finds it "ironic" that the London group should settle for Noranda after a long search for a possible linkup partner.

"Until a few years ago, Noranda, one of Canada's biggest mining houses and strong in copper, was a staunch upholder of the North American producer price system for selling its wares and was an equally staunch opponent of the London Metal Exchange," the paper says.

But the LME has grown more international and Noranda, too, has been branching out. The Financial Times adds.

VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, MAY 11, 1971 —PAGE 13

Bennett Is King Here

The city last fall spent $3,063.42 to make Bennett a freeman of the city.

For the royal visit this month, the city had budgeted only $1,700.

The Bennett affair is one of the more expensive items in the recently-released 1970 sundries and public receptions accounts, which amounted to $32,130.45.

The accounts show an assortment of things paid for by the city, from $9.74 for cigars and $33.50 for parking fines to $159.92 for a cocktail party and $737.68 for Christmas carrolling.

• • •

Most of the city's generosity towards Bennett went to the private, exclusive follow-up to a ceremony which drew a captive audience of a little more than 100 school children and hand-shaking officials.

Invitations for the reception at the Empress cost $102.37. The reception cost $1,641.75. A private reception held later in the day at the Union Club cost $530.94.

Bennett's present, a silver rose bowl, an engraved silver casket, a scroll and flowers cost $666.87. "Arranging flowers in the rose bowl" cost $21.

All in all, this took up most of the public reception account of $4,182.65.

Lesser items were $27 for an inaugural meeting and $159.92 for cocktails at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention last September.

The entire sundries and public reception accounts came to about one-sixth of one per cent of the city's $22,500,000 budget last year.

• • •

Some items are run-of-the-mill expenses such as legal and professional fees and one-shot government expenses like aerial photography, an armored car contract and insurance.

Also included are luncheons, tickets for a Christmas party, in-service course fees, a projector, flowers and chocolates.

The city spent $173.13 on coats-of-arms given to visiting cruise ships, the Salvation Army band and three track teams. Coasters for use by the mayor's office amounted to $80.16.

The city paid $145.53 for flowers sent to various persons; $1,022.17 on courses and society meetings for employees.

Expenses for seven luncheons refunded to city employees amounted to $93.80.

The city's share in the Municipal Finance Authority of B.C. is included in sundries, for $3,212. Roger's Chocolates: 25.

The city employees' annual Christmas carrolling performances, totalling $737.68, included $53.68 for candy canes, $300 for sound equipment, $318 rental for school board buses, $50 for organist and $16 to haul a piano.

If aldermen or employees get parking tickets while on city business, because they did not display their parking passes, or because it was not noticed by the ticketer, the city pays the fine.

Ald. Peter Pollen was the big ticket-getter for 1970, with $17.50 in fines. Ald. Ove Witt was second with $10. Fire Chief Eric Simmons and Ald. Harold Olafson each got a $2 ticket. David Groos, Liberal member of Parliament for Victoria, was also allowed a $2 ticket.

Set in place, rock and sandbag dam was built by 18 students from Colquitz Junior High Sunday on Colquitz Creek by the CNR trestle. Organized by the student council, 10 teen-agers spent Saturday cleaning out part of the creek. Object of dam is to raise water levels, not to shut off water flow.

Ottawa Funds Cool-Aid Farm

Victoria Cool-Aid's $7,500 food farm project has been approved by the federal Opportunities for Youth program.

Cool-Aid worker Laurie Smith said today the agency has been told by the secretary of state department the grant will be given.

He said Cool-Aid expects to get the money by June 1 and immediately will start paying $10 a day to people working the three-acre farm in Saanich.

Smith said Cool-Aid will use new workers every day throughout the summer, but they will be supervised by two full-time staff. The farm will provide food for people staying at Cool-Aid facilities and pocket money for travelling young people.

"WON'T BE HIT"

"It's probably going to make it easier for city welfare," Smith said. "Now they won't be hit by as many kids asking for bus money and money for food."

Several other agencies and municipalities in Greater Victoria do not appear to be as fortunate as Cool-Aid. Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and the Regional District submitted applications for jobs under the government's $15.8 million opportunities program.

Though no official announcements have come from Ottawa, it appears that these projects will not be approved.

Uvic Alma Mater Society president Ian McKinnon said no matter what the outcome of the proposals, a great many students and unemployed young people will be without work this summer.

DEMONSTRATION

As a result, he said, he will soon decide whether to organize a young people's demonstration in Victoria to protest unemployment.

McKinnon said he has just returned from Calgary where students and other young people demonstrated and got the federal government to give more money to Canada Manpower for youth projects.

No militant, McKinnon indicated he will consider all the angles before demonstrating. He said it would look bad if the demonstration occurred before final announcements came from Ottawa.

'CYNICISM'

Ottawa sources have said few municipal projects will be approved, because they do not involve young people in planning and administration. Strict adherence to this policy was made necessary because of the large number of requests.

Curtis said this amounts to "unbelievable mismanagement" of the project. For, he said, if Ottawa did not realize there would be so many applicants when they announced the program, they "simply have no idea of the size of the problem" of youth unemployment.

The mayor said he is more upset by the "cynicism" of the federal government than by the fact that Saanich's proposal likely will not be approved.

"It should be a long time before Canadian students forgive and forget this double-cross by the government," Curtis said.

QUEEN'S NAME MAY REPLACE FOUL BAY

The councils of Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich will consider changing the names of Henderson and Foul Bay Roads to either Queen Elizabeth Way or Queen Elizabeth Road in honor of the royal visit.

The name change is being advocated by Cliff Anderson, 2552 Chelsea, who has received assurance from all three mayors that the suggestion will be fully explored.

He has also received support for the project from the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Roomer Admits Fatal Fire Guilt

By DOUG MacRAE

Keith Alfred Shepherd, 29, was convicted of manslaugher and arson in B.C. Supreme Court today after he changed earlier pleas of not guilty on both counts to guilty.

Shepherd admitted setting a fire in a rooming house last Aug. 6 in which an 82-year-old fellow tenant was killed.

The accused was remanded in custody to June 15 for sentence, before which time Mr. Justice Victor Dryer will see a presentence report and the results of a psychiatric examination.

Shepherd's change of plea in mid-trial constituted an unusual development in Commonwealth law. Only four times in the past 50 years do law books contain reports of higher courts reviewing procedures of this type.

FORMALITY

Since the jury of eight men and four women had already been sworn, Dryer was not empowered to return a verdict himself, but despite Shepherd's admission of guilt he had to direct the jury to go through the formality of deliberating and returning its own verdict.

In his summation, prosecutor Louis Lindhom told the jury police officers were called to Coffee Mac's on Gorge Road at 4:30 a.m. Aug. 6.

Lindholm said the accused and two fellow members of Alcoholics Anonymous were waiting for police in the restaurant. Shepherd had told the AA men that he had started the fire but "didn't know how serious it was and wanted someone to talk to about it."

'RENT WAS DUE'

When Sergeant Gordon Bennett and Constable Harvey Stevenson entered, Shepherd told them, "I'm the guy you're looking for . . . I lit the fire at 325 Michigan."

"My rent was due and I had drunk my rent money. That's why I lit the fire."

The accuracy of the Crown's statements was voluntarily admitted on behalf of the accused by defence lawyer Dr. J. J. Gow, who was acting under Legal Aid.

Earlier evidence in the trial showed that Shepherd and victim Fred Dewhirst lived in adjoining house-keeping rooms on the third floor at 325 Michigan.

FELL TO GROUND

After a fire was started in the accused's room Dewhirst crawled through his window, clung by his fingertips and finally plunged to the ground three floors below.

He died of multiple internal injuries in hospital 18 hours later.

In changing his plea to guilty Shepherd told the court, "My counsel has instructed me as to the consequences and I am fully aware of what I am doing."

He appeared in court on crutches as a result of leg injuries received in a car accident which had postponed the trial after it had been set at an earlier date.

'Organized Crime' Victimizing Bikers

"Organized crime" has struck the racing bike set, Inspector John Post of Saanich warned this morning.

"We suspect groups of people working together have found theft of 10-speed bicycles to be profitable business," he said.

Post said the bikes are stolen, quickly repainted and then sold at lower prices to unsuspecting people.

"If you are offered a 10-speed for an exceptionally low price, or for what appears to be less than a reasonable price for the bicycle you should immediately be suspicious," said the inspector.

* * *

He urged bicycle owners to make their own identifying mark on their machine and also to learn by heart the serial number to assist police in recovering the vehicle if stolen.

Post estimated four to five bicycles stolen every day in Saanich and said "nine out of 10 times it is due to straight carelessness."

"The value of these machines is going up considerably," he said, "and a theft can represent quite a loss."

Labor to Huddle On Sandringham

A top-level meeting of labor officials will be held in Victoria Wednesday night to plan the next moves in the 224-day strike of employees at Sandringham Private Hospital.

Attending the meeting will be officials of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing the strikers, the B.C. Federation of Labor and the Victoria Labor Council.

Alex Markides, local representative for CUPE, said the meeting will assess the Sandringham strike and determine the next moves following the failure of Labor Minister James Chabot to find a solution.

Chabot talked to officials of the union and National Nursing Homes of Vancouver, which manages Sandringham on behalf of the owners, but said later the government will not intervene.

The private hospital, at 1650 Fort, has continued operations by hiring replacements for the women who went on strike seeking a first contract with the company.

Plumbers Get Pay Parity

Wage parity between lower Vancouver Island plumbers and their mainland counterparts will be achieved during a new two-year collective agreement, spokesmen for both sides said today.

Seventeen plumbing shops have accepted the new agreement, said R. K. Gervin of Construction Labor Relations Association. Local 324 of the Plumbers' Union, representing 200 men, accepted the agreement earlier.

The agreement provides an increase of $1.29 an hour in four stages over two years on the previous rate of $5.76 an hour.

Settlement also includes increases in employers' contributions to health and welfare (18 cents an hour instead of 16 cents) and pensions (13 cents an hour instead of 7 cents).

arthur mayse

ONE MORNING ON A basic training parade ground, a stumblefooted private dropped his rifle while attempting to present arms. Later, the platoon sergeant had a little talk with this miscreant.

"Mayse," he said, "it takes you twice as long as anyone else to learn anything. Then you get the hang of it and do it fine. Then" — and at this point his voice climbed to a wounded roar — "DAMN IF YOU DON'T FORGET HOW!"

Too true: and many a time since that painful episode, these reddening ears have caught an echo of the sergeant's indictment.

There was the day I created an interesting situation by forgetting that a man on a mountain ledge shouldn't get his feet crossed. Regularly each Monday morning, I forget how to type. And at least once each season, a skill required of anyone who hooks a trailer to a car deserts me completely.

Which brings us to an evening last week when fate and circumstance combined once again to demonstrate the truth arrived at by that outraged drill sergeant of long ago.

We had sold our travel trailer, a faithful friend, but one for which we didn't anticipate much future use. All that remained was to deliver it to the new owner, whose car wasn't yet rigged for towing.

So I coupled up and off we started.

We jogged along without incident to the street where the trailer was to take up residence. The buyer was standing outside his house.

"Good," he greeted us. "Now, if you'll just back it into my drive . . ."

It was a wide, uncluttered driveway. The street was pretty wide, too. No problem there.

I positioned the rig, and, guided by the big-eyed extension mirrors clamped to the car, began to back.

"You're missing the drive," my wife warned from beside me. Then, urgently, "We're jack-knifing!"

The hex that provoked the sergeant's explosion had struck again. Damn if I hadn't forgotten how to back a trailer.

"Better luck next time," I declared loudly but with no inward conviction.

Next try, the luck was not better. If anything, it was worse.

"Happens to all of us once in a while, heh, heh," I crooked to the buyer, who had hopped aside just in time. "I'd better drive around the block and take another pass at it."

While we were squaring the block, I explained to Win — and to myself — that there was nothing to backing a trailer. You merely place a hand on the lower arc of the steering wheel, and nudge the car's stern in the direction opposite to the one you would have those trailer wheels go. A familiar drill, and did she remember that time in the Cowichan bottomlands when we'd really had to thread the needle?

I interrupted this pep-talk to turn us into a block that in theory would complete our square. We were well along it when Win spoke.

"Funny," she said' "I didn't notice any sign. But I think we're in a dead end."

"You're kidding" I said.

But she wasn't, and no-through-road is no road at all for a man who has forgotten how to back a trailer. This I proceeded to demonstrate.

We tacked and yawed. The hex dug its claws deeper. A little dog appeared and began to bark, as who could blame him. Although she has been kind enough not to remind me of it, I have a vague recollection snarling at my dear one.

People came out of their houses. After all, it isn't every day that some idiot manages to block your nice, quiet street by plunking a car and trailer across it.

Everyone was very nice. Presently rescue turned up in the person of a trailer-piloting householder who hadn't forgotten how to back a rig.

In a single, neat pass, he straightened us away, and we got out of there.

We returned to where the purchaser, considerably mystified, was waiting to take possession. The hex eased to the point where I managed to back any old how into the mouth of his drive.

We unhitched and headed for home.

"You know," I said to my long-suffering companion, "that was almost as bad as the time I dropped my rifle on parade."

Wild Twins Adopt Stepmother

DETROIT (UPI) — For 30 years, Mrs. Helen Boyco had wanted to adopt the lively twins of her husband's first marriage but he had always brushed the idea aside, saying "they couldn't be any more mine than they already were."

The daughters, now mothers themselves, were both aware of this wish and as a Mother's Day surprise this year "adopted" their stepmother.

Among the Mother's Day gifts Mrs. Boyco received was an official court order, signed and sealed by Juvenile Court Judge James H. Lincoln, which decreed:

"Effective Mother's Day, May 9, 1971, the parent-child roles are reversed and Helen Boyco, by petitioners Patricia Hapiuk and Priscilla Dobritt, is possessed with all the blessings that she heretofore bestowed upon said petitioners, Patricia Hapiuk and Priscilla Dobritt. She is further bestowed with petitioners' prayers to the good Lord for all those blessings that cannot come through hands and heart."

The girls' father, who died last year, had always brushed aside Mrs. Boyco's idea of adopting the girls.

"He always said they couldn't be any more mine than they already were," said the 59-year-old Mrs. Boyco. "And of course that was true. But I wanted a paper and now I have one. I'm going to frame it."

The court order was obtained by The Detroit News after Mrs. Dobritt and Mrs. Hapiuk wrote to Contact 10, a reader service of the newspaper devoted to answering questions and solving problems, and told of their desire to give "our mother a very unusual Mothers' Day gift."

"We want to adopt her," the daughters said in their letter. "Our natural mother died when we were three months old and our father remarried four years later.

"She is the most wonderful woman for taking on the raising of a pair of wild twins as she did. Our father died last year and she is the only living parent we have. Could you help us adopt her by Mother's Day?"

"His honor nonetheless wrote out a formal court order, complete with gold seal, which we think equals the thought," Contact 10 said.

The children had a hard time learning a basic lesson in barnyard decorum. They wanted a good close look at the sheep but kept running up to them, stampeding the flock. After several attempts the message got through and they tiptoed up quietly for a good look.

The children had the fun of feeding the hens their lunch. It was a special treat for the hens as well —they usually have to find their own lunch. Unable to peck another bite the hens head for water escorted by a gallant white rooster.

Truth About Product Freshness

EDMONTON (CP) — Today's shoppers need the code-breaking skills of secret agent 007 if they want to find fresh food on the supermarket shelves.

But if you haven't the detective skills of a combined Charlie Chan and James Bond—to say nothing of the memory bank of an IBM computer—you may want to join a campaign to get foodstuffs marked in ordinary language so you know what you buy has not gone stale on the shelf.

She found vacuum-packed bologna in a large meat department that was two weeks old—at least.

"At least," she wrote in a column, "because I don't know how long the store had had it before it was packaged and offered for sale."

But she was lucky, because she was able to de-code that item.

But that doesn't hold good for all packaged meats. Some are coded at the factory with a number code printed along the top seam, such as 192.

One adds the first and last figures to get the month, she found out. The middle number is the day of the month it was packaged. In that code, it means it was packed March 9.

"Codes get worse than that," she warned. On a brand of packaged sausages she found one that was meaningless to herself and three clerks.

The clerks don't necessarily know the codes, either, she found out. In many cases, shelves are stocked and serviced by brokers' agents who are supposed to "pull" outdated stock.

Another type of code she found was used on unfrozen pizzas. These are stamped in purple ink on the bottom of the package. Letters of the alphabet are used for the month and numbers for the day. CO25 is March 25.

Fresh meats are also dated, sometimes in special store codes. One large grocery chain uses it plainly: May 8. But others use a small number to indicate the day: 1 for Monday, 2 for Tuesday, etc.

"0301 was March 1. The first two numbers were the month and the last two numbers were the date."

She found bacon was coded with perforated numbers along one edge. One brand used a similar code to the wieners. 0306 is March 6.

Another brand was 1101. For that one, add the first and last numbers to get the month, which is February. The middle two numbers are the date.

Bacon has a three-to-four-week life in a meat cooler. Mrs. Buck found one whose code meant it had only two more days to go.

These codes tell when the product was packed or when it reached the store shelf. But there are other codes.

For example, milk is marked with an expiry date. However, it's an embossed number along the top seam of the wax-board carton. You may need to get it under a strong light to read it.

If the embossed number is a 20, that means it expires on the 20th of the month. So don't buy it on the 19th unless you can use it right away.

Baked goods were mostly open-dated—May 10, for example—with the date they were baked.

Bread, however, came marked with little colored discs in the stores where she shopped, and the colors of the plastic tie or disc were rotated and never the same two weeks in a row.

"Unless we all become detectives and learn to read codes, we are totally dependent on other people doing a good job of pulling outdated stock.

"More than that. We are totally dependent on others doing a faultless job. And they're only human."

DEAR ABBY . . .

No Child a Tragedy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is my first letter to a column:

How should one react to the news that their friends have had an "abnormal" child? I think I can answer that because we had one. We were lucky enough to be told immediately of our baby's condition, and did not have the agony of the slow realization that "something was wrong."

Feeling it best to face the problem, we freely told our friends and relatives about our "special" child. Although we knew very little about what to expect, he was our baby and we knew we wanted to keep him with us. He is now a lovable, mischievous 11-year-old Mongoloid, going to a special school, and we have never regretted our decision.

Perhaps "congratulations" are not in order, but to ignore the presence of a new baby in a home, when you would normally express interest, is I think, cruel. To this day I remember the pleasure I felt when someone came to see our baby, to hold him, and to let me talk about him.

One of the burdens a mother of a retarded child has is not having anyone with whom to compare notes about her child's progress. Every tiny gain has a tremendous important meaning for the mother of a handicapped child.

So, do acknowledge the birth of a special child. Or send a little gift. Or send flowers to the mother. Continue to show an interest (not curiosity), and encourage the parents to get in touch with their local society for retarded children for help with mutual problems. It will be rewarded with much love, affection and gratitude.—Edith.

DEAR ABBY: I liked your answer to the person who wanted to know if she should acknowledge the brith of a Mongoloid child, or out of kindness ignore the "tragedy."

I will always be grateful to friends who sent out cards and gave us the feeling of "normalcy" when our Mongoloid son was born. He is now a happy six-year-old, and a great source of joy to us. He goes everywhere with us, and is so full of love, we wouldn't trade him for any other child in the world.

Not all Mongoloid children are severely retarded. No one knows at the time of his birth what his potential will be if given a chance. he deserves better than to be written off as a "tragedy." An investment of love and care and a little work can be returned tenfold.—Rusty's Mother.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

Friendliest animal of all when more than 30 children from the Centennial Day Care Centre visited the farm was the big brown horse next door. While sheep scattered and hens hid from the enthusiastic youngsters, the horses next door ambled over, pretending they were starving. The children fed them handfuls of grass, always greener on the other side of the fence.

Farm Visitors Meet Horses, Hens, Nettles

Story and Pictures
By MAUREEN DUFFUS

One of the fringe benefits of the non-profit farm is the annual visit of the nursery school, which is always fun for the farmer and sometimes a hair-raising experience for teachers.

It is also very educational for the children, who learn there's more to country life than baby chicks and bounding lambs.

Some years they learn that nettles really do sting, just as the teacher said they would; or that a sheep stampede can be started quickly by a few children running toward the flock or that horses really can kick people who run up behind them.

In the 10 years we have been enjoying school visits to our farm we've been lucky. The children, all but one, have learned these lessons with little more than pecked fingers and hurt feelings. (They patted the cranky hen, or missed their turn to hold a chick.)

The horse that did the best imitation of a bucking bronco was Naabi, who looked so sweet and gentle the youngsters wanted to ride him.

Naabi is a good actor, and unpredictable. Anyway, the rule has always been no riding.

The children asked if they could just pat the horse instead, but Naabi's flattened ears indicated he was in no mood to meet 20 affectionate little friends.

He was half a field away, luckily, when he turned his back on his audience, kicked like a killer stallion and galloped off to sulk under a tree.

It was a dramatic performance and the children got the message.

This year we have no horses of our own. It is much more relaxing to let the children pat our neighbors' friendly horses, across the fence.

☆

Another dramatic incident did not endanger the lives of the children, although I thought at the time I was in peril.

It taught them that a ram penned off from his wives and babies is a ram enraged.

Ghillie Bheagh had been penned because of his large curly horns. He once tossed a dog down a steep bank to keep it from playing with the lambs. We didn't want to take a chance on a repeat performance with a child.

Ghillie Bheag soon got himself trapped in a shed enclosed by the strongest fence on the farm. It would have been better, to leave him there, but the children felt sorry for the daddy sheep.

No intelligent person looks forward to being in a small shed with an enraged ram, especially if the ram distrusts the rescuer's motives. Ghillie Bheag is not overburdened with brain, and might have blamed me for his predicament.

Luckily the ram chose freedom first. He shot through the door and charged.

There is still a large bulge in the heavy wire fence. The children that year thought I was very brave.

☆

Even now, as an old, old ram with a limp, Ghillie Bheag retains a look of ferocity and the more timid children drop to the back of the sheep-watching group.

Over the years other children have learned other lessons: It is not wise to turn your back on a gander, try to pat a mother hen, or make a nesting hen eat an orange.

This year the visitors also learned what happens when a child sticks his finger into a cider press.

They had been told not to, of course, and had been very good until one little sub-group was marshalled to leave for the next point of interest.

The first little boy missed the rest of the tour but got a nice bandage and two stitches at the hospital emergency ward.

The teachers report that this year's visit to the farm was a great success.

The wayward bus didn't quite get stuck on the narrow farm driveway, thanks to the bus driver who skillfully manoeuvred his vehicle with inches to spare between steep bank and gate posts. The driver wished someone had told him about hazards of his charter assignment.

Little Orphan Annie wouldn't let her new son play with the children, and was glad the bus made it back up the driveway. She is a very possessive mother and won't even let him play with the other lambs. He will not develop a socially well-adjusted personality unless his strict mother changes her mind and lets him join the group.

Seeding Under Way

CALGARY (CP) — Despite delays due to rain, spring seeding operations are in progress on farms across Alberta, with almost 50 per cent of the wheat, oats and barley seeded in the Medicine Hat area.

The Alberta Wheat Pool said today in its report for the week ended May 8 that apart from the Medicine Hat area, wheat seeding elsewhere in the province was only about 8 per cent complete. This was slightly behind last year's progress, when 10 per cent had been completed by that time.

THE WEATHER

Most of the province is blanketed by a ridge of high pressure producing almost clear skies and afternoon temperatures ranging some five to ten degrees above normal for early May. A weak disturbance out of the Gulf of Alaska has moved into the extreme northwestern interior regions of the province and is expected to drift across the Charlottes and northern mainland by Wednesday afternoon. Variable cloud amounts over the Queen Charlottes today will increase and spread to the mainland. Occasional drizzle or very light rain is to be expected over the Charlottes today and tonight spreading to the mainland coastal areas Wednesday.

Whitehorse Votes Metro

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP)—Residents of Whitehorse and district Monday voted 68 per cent in favor of establishing metropolitan government over a metro area encompassing about 200 square miles.

About half of those eligible cast ballots and the count was 1,311 yes, 680 no. Fifty-nine ballots were spoiled.

A special session of the Yukon Territorial council is planned to set up the metro government for the city and unorganized residential areas.

Federal Works Minister Arthur Laing has authorized expenditure of $1.5 million for extension of a water system to the outside areas.

The metro government will have a broader tax base than the city of Whitehorse because a number of federal properties will be included in the area.

Guild's Cactus Flower Packs Plenty of Laughs

By AUDREY JOHNSON

"Leave 'em laughing" is a practically fail-safe prescription for generating goodwill, and in theatre is also insurance that the patrons will be back.

Victoria Theatre Guild makes use of these facts of life by presenting, for its end-of-season run, the Abe Burrows comedy, Cactus Flower, currently lighting up the stage at Langham Court Theatre.

Audience reaction indicated that this may well be the season's most popular production.

The script is exceptional. Its basic idea — a bachelor who has avoided marrying his mistress by claiming a non-existent wife and children then is confronted with the need to seek a divorce — is fraught with possibilities, none of which does the playwright miss.

As the plot develops, the comedy becomes radiant. The young mistress experiences conscience pangs and demands to meet his wife to make sure she really wants the divorce.

Enter, the bachelor dentist's office wife, a female as prickly and forbidding as the cactus she keeps on her desk. Or does her prickly exterior really encase a lovely seductive flower?

EFFECTIVE

Sheila Litt and Rod Symington as the nurse and the bachelor are extremely effective.

Mrs. Litt controls the charter, letting us feel the cool efficiency, and at the same time the thinness of the veneer, so that the appearance of the real person is entirely credible.

Symington's Dr. Julian Winston is a delight, whether he is being the smitten lover, the suave professional, or the panic-stricken, chivvied mere male.

The wide-eyed innocent who is the girl friend is played by Sue North, a very young actress and one with high promise. It's a pleasing performance, lively, likeable and clear.

Only lack of experience and, to a certain extent, specific direction, prevents it from being entirely satisfactory.

Almost the same things could be said of Denis Johnston who has the joyful role of Igor Sullivan, the girl friend's young, brash neighbor.

The anticipation of comedy is often the death of comedy. And here is a case in point with the mature actors playing it straight and in dead earnest and reaping at least 80 per cent of the laugh potential.

Sue North, on the other hand, and to a lesser extent, Johnson, are clearly aware that they are playing comedy. Miss North loses much of her own comic richness of her own role because she is not totally serious in approaching it.

A most effective characterization is provided by Jack Droy whose every scene leaves one wanting more of him.

Joan Mason Hurley was amusing in a rather overmannered performance as the rich patient. Others are Tibby Mason Hurley, Brian Lenton, Mike Farr and Bob Winkenhower.

Generally, direction by Bert Farr was competent although more attention might have been given to precision in timing of lines and co-ordinated business.

All in all, this is a lively, appealing entertainment and worth a visit any night this week to Langham Court.

Rosemary—A Good Low Hedge

By HILDA BEASTALL

Rosemary shrubs grown as low hedges within a garden have always intrigued me, for their lovely coloring and their fragrance are apparent in all months of the year. Nearly everyone who has lived here for more than a couple of years will recognize rosemary yet few accept its possibilities in garden design.

Hilda

A native of mild sea coasts, its name Rosmarinus (spray-of-the-sea) officinalis, also denotes its usefulness in the dispensaries of the old herbalists.

If left to itself against a warm wall where winter north east winds do not strike, I have seen rosemary reach a height of seven or eight feet, but as a low hedge between 18 and 30 inches the plant shows its greatest beauty.

The leaves resemble needles, about an inch long and a quarter-inch wide; dark green above, grey and felty below.

These remain all winter, and provide wonderful flavoring for roast meats, vegetable casseroles, oxtail soups, and even sparingly in apple pie. Something of freshly grated nutmeg is suggested.

By late April, clusters of flower buds begin to show at the bases of the leaves, so that the stems are crowded with buds.

Before mid May, a shrub will be a mist of tiny orchid-shaped blossoms, pale mauve with darker streaks on the lower lip. Bees and hummingbirds (we still hope for a return of these latter) will visit rosemary for nectar, and repay by pollinating the flowers to provide some seed if we want it.

However, the way to build up a low densely flowering hedge is to cut off all flowered portions just as soon as the flowers fade.

This usually means removing nine to 12 inches of stems all over the plants. Within a week, the new growth will begin; it will ripen during summer and fall, to produce flower buds in spring.

Propagation can be done in August, by taking young shoots of this year's growth, and inserting them into sandy soil in a sheltered coldframe, or in a sunny corner outdoors. Roots will be formed during the following spring.

Lots of sun, a soil which remains well drained in the wettest winter, no fertilizer or fresh manures, these are necessities for growing rosemary. In shade with rich damp soil, it will be a poor thing and likely succumb to a hard winter frost.

Only one variety of the species has been discovered. This is the low, naturally spreading R. prostratus.

Unfortunately, while it would provide us with a ready-made low hedge, it is certainly not reliably resistant to our normal winter frosts.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

In today's deal, when East opened the bidding with one notrump, little did he dream that the bid would enable his North-South opponents to fulfill a game contract. Had East been gifted with E.S.P., he would have passed originally (on 16 points!). South would then almost surely have been defeated. The hand arose in a rubber-bridge game. Both sides vulnerable. East deals.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 NT	2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

After West had opened the jack of hearts, and the dummy came into view, a significant thought flashed through South's mind: East had every other high card in the deck! The thought arose out of the appreciation that East, who had opened the bidding with one notrump, had 16-18 highcard points. And since only 16 high-card points were outstanding (exclusive of West's heart jack), East had to have all of them.

West's jack of hearts won the opening lead when everybody followed suit with low hearts. On West's next heart lead dummy again played low, and East's queen captured the trick. East then laid down the heart ace, which South ruffed.

A diamond was led next to dummy's ace, after which the spade 10 was played and the finesse taken against East's king. When the finesse proved successful (as it figured to be), the spade nine was played. It won the trick when East and South followed with low spades.

Now the jack of clubs was led, which East covered with the queen, South's ace winning. After the ace of trumps had picked up East's king, South led the club four. With West following suit with the seven-spot, dummy's nine was inserted. When it won the trick, declarer conceded a diamond and claimed his contract.

The "normal" way of playing the club suit would have been to cash the ace, and then lead a low club, finessing dummy's jack. Had declarer done this, he would have gone down.

As was stated, however, East was known to have the club queen for his opening one notrump bid. Hence the "normal" way of playing clubs couldn't be right. So declarer utilized the play known as the "backwards" finesse: leading the jack initially — and hoping that West possessed the 10 of clubs.

9 IN MEMORIAM

MacKAY — In ever loving memory of a dear husband and father, Neil MacKay, who passed away May 11th, 1965.
We seem to see in the soft dim light,
A face we loved the best,
And think of him when the sun's last ray,
Goes down in the far off West.

MAYCOCK — In loving memory of Ronald W. Maycock, who passed away May 11, 1970.
—Wife Lillian and family, Kenneth, Brian, Bruce and Norma.

MILNES — Resting peacefully since May 11, 1969.
You left without a fond farewell and left a vacant gap for us.
We always hold your memories of things we used to share.
—Vi, Irene, Louis.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

CABLEVISION 10 LISTINGS. 7 p.m., Ladies First—Community Chest Forum, Boy Scouts; 8 p.m., film—Edge of the Barrens and Face of the High Arctic; 8:30 p.m., Victoria Outdoorsmen—hunting and fishing; 9 p.m., You and the Law—Saanich Police Dept.; 9:30 p.m., Outlook—Helen Beirnes.

* * *

UFO. 7 p.m., Channel 6. Apparently, defending the world from alien invaders from space is hard on marriages. Straker in this episode starts reminiscing about how SHADO security measures led to the breakup of his marriage.

* * *

JULIA. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5 (rerun). All Corey (Marc Copage) wanted was to win honorable mention in the essay contest because the prize was a color TV set and he wanted to give it to his mother, Julia (Diahann Carrol). But Corey's essay, about his father killed in Vietnam, won third prize instead. A little manipulating works it out. Jackie Coogan has a guest role as the mailman.

* * *

THE BEVERLY HILLBILLIES. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7 (rerun). Mammy Yokum and her Dogpatch brew has nothing on Granny's anti-frog potion. She mixes up a magic brew to keep Elly May's boyfriend from turning into a frog.

* * *

DON KNOTTS SHOW. 8 p.m., Channel 5 (rerun) Guests are singers Steve Lawrence and Cass Elliot, and comedy actor Louis Nye. Louis does a funny bit as a UN interpreter, fluent in five languages. Steve and Cass get together for a duet and also do solo numbers.

* * *

GREEN ACRES. 8 p.m., Channel 7 (rerun). Everybody feels sorry for the Douglases because Lisa is spotted in the county welfare department's soup line. Until it is properly explained, the Douglases find themselves the unwanting recipients of their neighbors' benevolences as well as sympathies.

* * *

SPECIAL 8 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. The Queen's address, from Government House in Victoria to culminate the royal tour of British Columbia, is to be telecast for 30 minutes. Wednesday the Royal Family returns to Britain by air.

* * *

MOVIE OF THE WEEK. 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. "Weekend of Terror" (rerun). A good suspense drama with strong emphasis on character studies. Two kidnappers, played by Robert Conrad and Lee Majors, accidentally kill their hostage, then desperately look for another girl who looks like their victim for a deception that might save the bid for ransom money. Instead of one new victim, they get three—all nuns—performed by Lois Nettleton, Carol Lynley and Jane Wyatt.

* * *

TUESDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES. 9 p.m., Channel 5. "Plymouth Adventure" (1952) (rerun). Starring two-time Academy Award winner Spencer Tracy (but hardly for this), Gene Tierney and Van Johnson, as John Alden. Opulent and sudsy, it is the tale of the Mayflower crossing in 1620. Tracy is the surly Captain Christopher Jones who has little regard for his passengers or crew. Lloyd Bridges plays the first mate who tries to start a mutiny.

* * *

ALL IN THE FAMILY. 9:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12 (rerun). This one could well be titled "My Friend Can Whip Your Friend Anytime." Archie (Carroll O'Connor) and his son-in-law (Bob Reiner) get into an argument over the masculinity of their respective friends. Look, man, how bitchy can one get?

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Many a time, I have received a sad letter from a woman telling me about her troubles with an elderly parent who, with the coming of age, has become crabbed, bad-tempered and savage, hard to get along with, and likely to "jump all over" people.

The woman may write, "I don't know Dad anymore — he is like a stranger to all of us.' Then my mind goes back to a chat I once had with the superintendent of a zoo. He was telling me how much fun young lions and gorillas and chimpanzees are, and how the people in the zoo love them and in return are loved by the young animals.

This goes on for years, until the animal begins to get old, and then he may become savage and untrustworthy and dangerous. Occasionally, with his old friends and playmate, the zoo attendant, he may be friendly and affectionate. But then suddenly he may lose his temper and proceed to maul or kill the attendant. What happens then? The animal who used to have the run of the place, with everyone petting him and playing with him, is put behind bars and is kept there, shut up.

As I listened to my friend the zookeeper, I thought to myself, how careful we people should be as we grow old. Bars have to be put up in front of the aging animal; but some of older human beings put up the bars in front of ourselves — bars that keep away from us friends and young people and our families, whose affection and friendship would help to keep us young.

Might it not be a good idea for all of us to vow never to put up bars in front of us.

TAYLOR

Organ Recital

The Wednesday evening recital series at St. John's Anglican Church continues this week, with Jean Taylor featured at the console of the organ.

She will play music of the great organ masters, including Toccata in A minor by J. P. Sweelinck, two chorale preludes by Johannes Brahms and a Prelude, Fugue and Chaconne in D minor by J. Pachelbel.

Assisting will be violin and viola duetists, Nancy Meredith and Elizabeth Bredberg in a performance of a Mozart Duo.

Before the Judge

A 53-year-old man was sentenced to four months in prison Monday by Judge William Ostler for false pretences and obtaining food and lodging by fraud.

Harold C. Skinner, court was told, stayed at the Empress Hotel for two days in early April and ran up a bill of $49.91 for room, food, phone and tax.

He pleaded guilty Monday to purchasing mens' clothing and accessories worth $46 from British Importers Men's Wear, 631 Yates, April 1 with a worthless cheque.

The offence involved a $10 cheque Ball cashed in February at a grocery store on Eastdowne Road made out to himself and allegedly signed by his mother.

Ostler ruled as part of the probation that Ball attend the alternative program of the Boy's Club of Victoria.

★ ★ ★

Georgina B. Robinson, 19, of Duncan, was given a suspended sentence with a one-year probation on two counts of shoplifting.

The offences involved women's clothing she took April 8 from both The Bay and Eatons.

★ ★ ★

Lawrence W. Crossman, 52, of 3316 Aldridge, was found guilty of shoplifting several items including a bottle of pills, razor blades and gum from The Bay about 8 p.m. April 1.

A security officer testified that she saw the accused take the items from the drug department.

Ostler fined Crossman $250.

Bernice Thomas, 19, of 358 Burnside, was given a suspended sentence and placed on probation for a year for shoplifting.

The offence involved $57 worth of merchandise including clothes, cosmetics and stereo tape equipment taken from Woolco department store April 15.

Robert McVey, 54, of 1265 Grant, was fined $300 in traffic court by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for impaired driving and prohibited from driving for a month.

★ ★ ★

John M. Walker, 55, of 3915 Scoulton, was fined $300 for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent. He was also prohibited from driving for three months except on business purposes.

★ ★ ★

Jimmy Andresen, 34, of 26 Stillwater, and Harry Blake Crothers, 66, of 1023 Clarke, were fined $250 and given a partial three-month driving ban.

ESQUIMALT REJECTS AID REQUEST

Short Shrift for Maritime Museum

The Maritime Museum of B.C. on Bastion Square, fighting for its financial life, will get no help from the municipality that once housed it—Esquimalt.

Council voted Monday night to reject a request from the museum for $750 in aid. A. G. Coning, chairman of the museum's board of trustees, had warned council that without help the institution might not survive.

"Without this small financial support, the museum will inevitably fall into financial difficulties and be forced to cease operations," Coning said.

"One has only to look across the Strait of Georgia to see how envied this area is in its possession of a viable maritime museum, and to see that our collection would be snapped up by those in other areas who believe that the preservation of our maritime history is worth paying for."

The intermunicipal committee earlier rejected a request from the museum for $7,000, and requests have been made to the individual area municipalities. Only Oak Bay has come through, with a $1,000 grant.

PRESSURE ON GOV'T

Such a takeover has been suggested to the province by the maritime museum itself.

Ald. Roger Prentice suggested that the museum's honorary trustees might be able to bring pressure to bear on the government. These trustees include H. R. MacMillan and Premier Bennett.

The museum moved from Esquimalt to its present downtown location in 1968.

Council was equally tightfisted in considering a request for an intermunicipal grant for the Capital Region Safety Council.

The intermunicipal committee's rejection of a request for a $1,000 grant was supported by Esquimalt.

In other business, council:

● Approved bylaw amendemnts limiting outside incinerator burning to a 10 p.m. deadline.

● Announced plans to enforce a provincial statute which prohibits smoking and requires that car motors be turned off during fuel purchases at gas stations. Signs will be posted in the stations.

● Promised to "find another answer" to the problem of smoke and debris from municipal trash burning at the Fleming's Beach boat launching site. Cyril D. Gagnon, 1104 Hadfield, had complained to council of the air pollution, and Ald. Ken Hill, also a resident of the area, admitted his lawn also was showered by soot and burning paper.

● Approved rezoning, subject to a public hearing, of land north of Halfway House, 856 Esquimalt, for use as a parking area.

● Forwarded to the Emergency Measures Organization two letters concerned with boating safety.

The District of Campbell River was soliciting Esquimalt support for a manned rescue aircraft to be available at Comox seven days a week, and for air-sea rescue personnel co-ordinated all along the coast.

Esquimalt Anglers' Association suggested safety precautions be stepped up along the waterfront, and that an RCMP officer be on duty at the ramp on weekends and holidays to administer safety checks to boats before they are put in the water.

● Referred to committee for study a suggestion that a student be hired to knock on doors this summer to make sure dog licences are valid. Council was told pet control was costing almost as much as the municipality was getting in dog licence revenue, largely because many licences are not kept up-to-date.

● Expressed hope that a $20,000 beautification program for Esquimalt Road will "catch fire" and lead to improvements on another stretch of the artery next year.

The chamber of commerce advised council that member businessmen would be willing to weed and water precast planters to be placed in front of their premises at a cost to the municipality of $1,000.

B.C. WILL KEEP LIQUOR IMMOBILE

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Monday he has no intention of recommending that B.C. follow Ontario's example in setting up mobile liquor stores to serve holiday areas.

"We'll give it the attention it deserves," Peterson said when asked about the idea being tried out by Ontario. He then indicated it deserved no attention.

Peterson said the sale of liquor from mobile stores put it on the same basis as selling ice cream and candy and said the government doesn't agree that alcohol is a comparable substance.

The Ontario government plans to sell liquor and beer from trailers to serve summer and winter recreation areas on an experimental basis.

CENTENNIAL SQUARE

Chinese Pageant Fantasy

A centennial Chinese pageant will take place Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in Centennial Square.

The event is sponsored by the Victoria Chinatown Lions Club and is called a Golden Mountain Fantasy.

More than 80 people will be in the cast for the pageant which tells the history of British Columbia's Chinese from the building of the CPR railway to today. Performers will be dressed in authentic sequinned and beaded costumes.

Script for the show has been written by Jack and Bessie Tang. Ceremonies include ribbon and folk dances, a band performance by the Victoria Chinatown Lions Drum and Bell Corps, fire baton twirling, firecrackers, displays of Kung Foo (Chinese art of defence) and Chinese opera costumes, and a performance by Hong Kong movie and singing star Garvin Tse.

The pageant will conclude with the Celestial Lion Dance.

Rest Home Demands Get 'Another Look'

The provincial government will "take another look" at demands of rest home operators for higher welfare case payments, Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi said Monday.

Gaglardi met for more than an hour with a delegation from the B.C. Rest Homes Association to hear complaints about the government's scale of payments for rest home guests who are on welfare.

The minister confirmed that the "basic rate" for such guests is $150 a month and that it can go up to $174 depending on the level of care needed.

John Hanrahan, vice-president of the association, indicated after the meeting that the explanation of the new rate scale was unsatisfactory to the association.

But the earlier threat of eviction of welfare guests unless the government met demands would have to be discussed with the association's membership when the results of the Gaglardi meeting are considered, Hanrahan said.

Gaglardi said the delegation made no mention of the eviction threat and he repeated earlier statements that he doesn't think there will be any evictions.

The government announced an increase in the welfare payment scale from the $150 maximum to the new $174 maximum last week after the initial eviction threat.

Work For Money?

One bold stroke to solve two of the area's pressing problems — unemployed youth and parks maintenance—was suggested Monday night by Esquimalt Ald. Art Mebs.

"Let's go to (Rehabilitation Minister Phil) Gaglardi and get some of those young, virile unemployed men to work for their money," Mebs told council during debate on regional parks.

Ald. Ken Hill agreed: "Many of these able-bodied people would love a chance to work for their money."

Mayor Art Young liked the idea, too, but thought organized labor would object to men working for the equivalent of welfare payments.

Council supported a motion by Mebs to forward a resolution to the Union of B.C. Municipalities, suggesting that the UBCM take the idea to the province — "not only for park work but for the broad over-all situation as well."

Urgent Call Issued By Volunteer Bureau

The Volunteer Bureau issued an urgent call Monday for volunteers to help understaffed private hospitals get patients out to enjoy the sunshine, read to blind patients, and help with handicrafts.

Volunteers are also needed to drive Saanich's Meals on Wheels van.

Drivers are needed to take Canadian Mental Health Association members for treatments.

Volunteers are also required for helping occupational therapists, selling handicrafts in gift shops, teaching Boy Scouts and Cubs, driving patients to doctor and hospital appointments, helping physiotherapists, working in children's clinics during lunch hours, assisting with physically handicapped preschoolers, hospital auxiliary workers, driving handicapped people to daily workshops.

Retired cabinet workers are needed to help in an educational program, persons are needed to teach wood-finishing to young people, saleswomen are required to man the shop at the Eric Martin Institute.

There is also a need for artists, remedial teachers and other specialized talents.

'SIN COLLEGE' SIGN DRAWS STARES

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Even in this day of X-rated movies and the so-called new morality it startled more than a few persons to see a lighted sign on an Indianapolis school which read: "Central Sin College." The sign was supposed to say "Central Business College," but all the letters in the middle word had burned out except the "sin" portion.

HELLO, GOODBYE. Bill Hembroff, 48, who began walking April 30 the 400-mile stretch from Victoria to Cape Scott, is greeted by his wife as he arrived in his home-town of Courtenay. Hembroff, who is almost at the half-way point, expects to finish the walk on May 25 in an effort to raise $10,000 for a centennial museum for Courtenay.

Budget Up Taxes Down In Duncan

DUNCAN — The average Duncan homeowner will receive a decrease in his taxes, Finance Chairman Ald. Tom Kilpatrick told council Monday.

The decrease was brought around because of the $10 increase in the homeowner's grant and only a small increase in the city's budget, he said.

Council gave three readings to the $1,314,996 budget which is an increase of $37,869 above 1970.

Although the majority of aldermen did not want to give the budget a third reading until they had more time to study it, they were told it had to be passed by Friday.

Ald. Hamish Mutter asked for the study of a new policy to see that council has more time to deliberate over the budget.

"It is quite wrong the way it has been done," he said.

U.S. Transients Worry Quaife

DUNCAN — Concern over American citizens receiving social assistance was expressed Monday by Mayor Jim Quaife after he learned Duncan's welfare costs for April had risen over $500.

April's total was $17,278.54 compared to $16,742.83 in March.

Although every segment of the welfare distributions had risen Ald. John Comer said the major increases were due to an increase of four families and 16 transients.

Quaife asked Comer to look into "people from the States receiving welfare without proving residency. They just receive as landed immigrants."

Iva Woodward, local supervisor of the department, said this morning that Duncan is not plagued with American immigrants seeking assistance like Victoria and Vancouver.

"We have given money to very few Americans," Miss Woodward said.

An unsponsored landed immigrant has the same rights as a Canadian citizen, she said.

"If they come in we have to consider their case."

Resident Wants Pavement For City's 'Worst Alley'

DUNCAN — Council was told Monday by an irate resident if the "worst back alley in the city of Duncan" is not paved residents will pick up their tomahawks.

"Five years ago people on Price Road were guaranteed by council that when Dobson Road was finished our road would be curbed and have hardtop on it," Hindmarch said. "Nothing has been done."

Hindmarch said the short street seems to be the only unpaved road in Duncan.

'DUST AND POTHOLES'

"We have nothing but dust and potholes," he said. "There are weeds and telephone poles out in corners. It is absurd that we taxpayers have to put up with it."

In the 15 years he has lived on the road Hnidmarch said all he has seen is a patching crew.

"We demand something be done right now. We are holding you to the commitment of council five years ago."

Hindmarch noted that several of the residents have lived on the road over 20 years.

Terry English recalled living in Chemainus and having to water the street to keep the dust down.

"Now I find 45 years later I am still doing it" he said." "There has been no progress."

The residents went away happy after Ald. Tom Kilpatrick assured them improvements will be made.

He did not reveal the solution but Hindmarch warned the delegation does not want to have to come again too soon because next time "we are coming with our tomahawks."

MAN TO STAND TRIAL ON WOUNDING CHARGE

DUNCAN — A 20-year-old Duncan man elected trial by judge and jury in court here Monday after being charged with wounding with intent to maim.

Gannang Thom was released on $1,500 bail until his preliminary hearing June 2 at 10 a.m.

Parents Advised On Fluoridation

DUNCAN — Parents here have been advised to contact their physician, dentist or the Margaret Moss Health Centre if they want to obtain the benefits of fluoridation.

Dr. P. J. Reynolds, director of the Central Vancouver Island Health Unit, said today the city's water supply does not contain any fluoride, either natural or added.

"Parents should be putting a few drops per day of fluoride in a child's drink" said a local dentist.

HARDER TEETH

A child should be put on the fluoride treatment program from the time of birth and continued until the age of 12.

The treatment is only good for teeth that have not yet "erupted" into the mouth.

"The fluoride ions get into the tooth and make it harder and more decay-resistant," he noted.

The three-way fluoride program also includes having a child's teeth cleaned and painted with fluoride every six months and having the child use fluoride toothpaste.

Seek Volunteers

DUNCAN — The recently formed Cowichan chapter of Big Brothers is calling again for more volunteers to work with fatherless boys.

Publicity chairman Michael Coleman said a screening and selection committee, consisting of local businessmen Paul Aldersey and Bob Howard, social worker Filomena Pilorusso, and probation officer Bob Purgavie, has been set up to review applications from prospective Big Brothers.

Because nothing less will serve British Columbia.

B.C. Tel has a billion-dollar plan

Underground Cable is part of it.

The people of British Columbia frequently ask what B.C. Tel is doing to keep telephone wire and cable out of sight.

During 1970, the company's underground and buried cable installations cost more than $12 million. In 1971, such installations will cost $13.5 million — which represents about 60 per cent of the total cost of cable and wire additions required in this year's telephone network expansion. The percentage and dollar figures will increase each year in the future, with an anticipated outlay exceeding $50 million for underground installations during the coming three years.

In British Columbia's difficult terrain, underground installations are not always possible — but B.C. Tel's practice is to bury facilities wherever this can be done physically and within economic reason. The objective is to place new installations underground at the start and to go underground when replacing existing overhead plant as it wears out.

Progress is being made in an orderly way through a carefully co-ordinated over-all expansion program designed to meet the increasing telephone service demands of British Columbia's growing population — and to meet the desire of all of us for improved esthetic conditions — in the most economic fashion possible.

The total expansion program for the 1970s, underground installations included, is expressed as B.C. Tel's Billion-Dollar Plan because that is the minimum cost the company faces in creating new and improved facilities essential to meet projected needs of the province for telephone services.

Nothing less will meet the telephone demands — and desires — of a growing British Columbia.

Criminal Fraud, Charges Nader

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer advocate Ralph Nader, testifying on auto design before the Senate commerce committee, accused U.S. auto-makers of "criminal fraud" and turned on the committee for what he said was its failure to serve consumers.

Nader testified Monday along with representatives of the Big Three auto-makers who generally opposed provisions of a bill that would set federal damage standards for autos.

Spokesmen for Ford, General Motors and Chrysler said they were having trouble enough meeting safety and air pollution standards that will boost car prices $450 to $600 by 1975.

They urged Congress not to burden them with a "third set of goals" that could drive away customers and severely impair the national economy.

However, they said, the customer should be allowed to buy additional protection against damage.

SAYS BILL TOO WEAK

Nader, too, opposed the bill, but as too weak.

He accused commerce committee members of grovelling before the Senate appropriations committee by sending it vague bills that lack specific funding requests for consumer programs, thus permitting appropriations group to slash the programs at will.

But it was the remark about "grovelling" and his use of the phrase "criminal fraud" in auto designing that touched off sharp criticism by committee members.

One criticized Nader for not discussing foreign auto-makers in his testimony and said that he was not giving U.S. auto-makers "credit where credit is due."

"You look for the worst in people and not what's good," said Senator Ted Stevens of Alaska.

"Do you give a burglar credit because he doesn't burglarize 99 per cent of the time?" said Nader. "What kind of nonsense if that?"

Egypt Insists On Pullback

(From AP-Reuter)

Egypt told U.S. State Secretary William Rogers that before it will reopen the Suez canal, Israel will have to pull back 115 miles from the waterway and within six months agree to a timetable for withdrawal from all occupied Arab lands.

The Egyptians also refused to commit themselves to allowing Israeli ships to use the canal, saying only that they would study the question "within our political organizations" and take a stand later.

President Anwar Sadat Monday night gave this report of the talks last week with the American secretary of state. Sadat spoke to the 360-member parliamentary committee of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only political party.

Sadat described Rogers' Middle East mission as an effort to move negotiations "from a standstill to an active phase."

Reuter news agency reported a Sadat warning to the parliamentarians and cabinet ministers that Egypt would go to war if current political efforts fail in settling peacefully the Arab-Israeli conflict.

REPORT ISRAELI STAND

Informed sources in Tel Aviv reported Israel might permit small units of Egyptian police to move across to the Israeli-occupied east bank but would bar Egyptian troops. Israel also insists, they said, on maintaining its Bar-Lev defensive line along the canal.

Sadat said he told the American secretary Egyptian troops must cross to the eastern side "to guarantee the safety of navigation."

Rogers met with Sadat last week before visiting Israel. The Egyptian president afterwards conferred again with Joseph Sisco, assistant U.S. secretary of state, who flew to Cairo Saturday to present Israel's views.

AUSTRALIA SEEKING PEKING DIALOGUE

CANBERRA (Reuter) — Prime Minister William McMahon announced tonight plans to seek a dialogue with Peking after Opposition Labor Leader Gough Whitlam had revealed he hopes to visit China next month.

McMahon said in a statement that his cabinet had come to this decision after noting the rapid succession of events suggesting a marked development in the willingness of China to deal with the rest of the world.

Living Costs Rise 32% Since 1961

OTTAWA — The average family's cost of living is approaching a level a third higher than it was 10 years ago, following a jump in April of nearly a full point in the consumer price index.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today that the index last month was 132.2, up 0.9 of a point from March and 2.5 points higher than a year ago.

For every $100 spent on food, housing, clothing, and other consumer expenditures in 1961, the same goods and services last month cost $132.20. The bill will probably exceed $133.30 later this spring.

In computing its index, the bureau surveys the prices of about 300 consumer goods and services ranging from rents and new house prices to foods, beauty treatments and bicycles.

In the survey clothing, housing and food prices led the increase which the bureau said was about average for the last five years.

Under questioning in the Commons by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield he said that the government had not taken the position that inflation had been licked "once and for all".

Stanfield said it was "the shortest licking in history."

In percentage terms, the index last month was 1.9 per cent higher than a year earlier — just under the two-per-cent annual rate of price increase many economists say is the borderline to inflation.

The gain for the month was seven-tenths of one per cent, compared with a March-to-April increase of six-tenths of one per cent last year.

The main increases were nine-tenths of one per cent in both the housing and clothing segments of the over-all index, which together make up more than 40 per cent of it. The food index, accounting for more than 25 per cent of the over-all index, rose seven-tenths of one per cent.

DOLLAR THE SAME

The over-all change in the price index for April, however, was insufficient to change the bureau's calculation of the current purchasing power of the 1961 consumer dollar. It remained at 76 cents, unchanged from March and down one cent from 77 cents in April, 1970.

U.K. Farm Offer Goes to Market

BRUSSELS (CP) — Geoffrey Rippon of Britain opened a major Common Market negotiating session today with a new proposal on adapting British farming to the system in the European Economic Community.

Rippon, leading the negotiations for British entry into the six-nation Common Market, called the morning meeting "very satisfactory."

Farm policy is a matter of critical importance to Canada and other Commonwealth countries which have had preferred access to the British market over the years and now stand to lose it.

A British spokesman said that he believes progress can be made on the farm question and also on these matters:

● Britain's membership in the European Atomic Energy Organization — known as Euratom — which is the market's organization for the peaceful use of nuclear energy.

● Free entry into Britain of limited quantities of some industrial products from countries outside the Market. This would include aluminum oxide from Canada.

The market is expected to make a new offer to Britain on this question.

Dollar Firm, Pound Hit

From AP-Reuter

A strong demand for the U.S. dollar built up on the London foreign exchange market today as speculators rushed to cover the dollars they sold short last week to buy West German marks. The pound sterling was under persistent selling.

There was no evidence the speculators were selling marks or Swiss francs to take their profits from the increased value of those currencies. They seemed to be holding on to them in the hope of even bigger profits.

As a result, the pound was hit by selling described as persistent but not hectic. The pound opened at $2.41745, fractionally higher than Monday's close, but soon slid off to $2.4165, its lowest point in weeks.

INDIAN STORY BLASTED

The amount of publicity given to one drunken Indian at a royal tour event at Sandspit in the Queen Charlottes amounts to a "mis-use of journalism," Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said today.

Campbell, speaking as chairman of the provincial fund to aid Indian development, said the "over-emphasis" on the incident was indicative of "the idea that every Indian is a drunken Indian.

The incident occurred Monday when a Haida Indian dancer fell down in view of the royal family and had to be guided from the scene.

State Dinner, Fireworks Will End Royal Tour

After a scheduled arrival in the Inner Harbor on board the Britannia at 3:30 this afternoon, the royal party will leave the yacht for a state dinner at Government House tonight at 7:30 p.m.

The quick drive will proceed east on Belleville, north on Government, east on Fort, north on Douglas, east on Pandora, south on Cook, east on Rockland to Government House.

At the dinner the Queen will deliver a nationally-televised address at 9 p.m. on CTV and 9:30 p.m. on CBC.

Last chance to see the Queen in Victoria will be when she returns to Britannia soon after 10:30 p.m. for the overnight sail to Vancouver.

The royal yacht is scheduled to leave the harbor at 11 p.m. There will be a big fireworks display as a farewell as the Britannia steams past Beacon Hill Park at 11:15 p.m.

The royal party leaves by air for London on Wednesday from Vancouver.

ROYAL APLOMB

The formal state dinner tonight follows a light-hearted day in Prince Rupert and the Queen Charlottes Monday.

One drunk caused brief embarrassment—this was at Sandspit—but the minor flutter was handled with royal aplomb on one hand and discretion by the RCMP on the other.

It was a terrible embarrassment to the Haida Indians because he was one of their dancers—or should have been—and it was impossible for the Queen not to see him.

Some residents of Cumberland, a small town just south of Courtenay, were upset Monday that the Queen's visit to their town had been cancelled.

Officials said a lack of time forced the removal of Cumberland from the royal itinerary but one resident, Mrs. Ellen Miller, 82, called it the "dirtiest trick" that had ever been played on her. Cumberland mayor Bill Moncrief turned down an invitation to meet the royal family at Comox, saying the issue had been already too controversial and that he did not want to spoil the Queen's tour.

Premier and Mrs. Bennett were happy guests aboard the Britannia Monday and today after receiving an apparently unexpected invitation from the Queen and Prince Philip. They spent the day cruising in the Strait of Georgia with the royal family after boarding Britannia at Comox.

Formula Accepted

GENEVA (Reuter) — The 25-national Geneva disarmament conference today unanimously accepted a special meeting to break an East-West deadlock over the proposed underground nuclear weapon test ban.

3-Year Sentence

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Mario J. Escamilla, convicted by a federal court jury Monday of involuntary manslaughter in a slaying on a floating Arctic ice island, has been sentenced to the maximum peanalty, three years in prison.

Union Pickets B.C. Legislature

For the first time in 14 years, a picket line was thrown up in front of the legislative buildings today by the B.C. government Employees Union.

It was an information picket by government electricians seeking higher wages. It lasted for half an hour at noon today.

The action preceded the union's second round of wage negotiations with the civil service commission beginning at 3 p.m.

SEEK $98 MORE

The electricians are currently receiving $865 a month and are seeking $963. Their demands are based on wages paid to electricians employed by other public agencies, an official said.

B.C. Hydro pays $917 a month, major hospitals $971, lower mainland municipalities $899 and the construction industry $1,064, the official said.

INJUNCTION

The pickets, also set up at the Civil Service Commission office at 544 Michigan Street and a number of government offices throughout the province.

Picketing of government buildings is illegal but a deputy public works minister, Arnold Webb, said he didn't know whether any action — likely by injunction — would be taken if the picketing is only for a short period.

Webb said the first he heard of the picketing was this morning from a reporter.

ROLLS-ROYCE, LOCKHEED REACH TERMS

LONDON (Reuter) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. of the United States signed a conditional contract with Rolls-Royce today to buy RB211 engines from the British firm for the Tri-Star airbus.

The contract is conditional upon obtaining approval of the U.S. Congress, needed for a U.S. government guarantee for the $250 million in bank loans that Lockheed wants to continue the airbus project.

The contract marks a major step in the series of negotiations that have gone on since the financial collapse of Rolls-Royce in February.

PM 'Accepts Blame' For Unemployment

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The federal government accepts the blame for high unemployment in Canada, Prime Minister Trudeau said in a radio interview Monday.

Mr. Trudeau told interviewer Jack Webster he regretted the high unemployment but said inflation with high employment was not an acceptable alternative to no inflation with high unemployment.

"If we could live with inflation and have a booming economy and more employment, that would be great."

But 50 per cent of Canada's produce now goes into export markets and "if we let inflation run away in Canada we will lose our markets and the workers who try to produce for those markets will be out of a job."

Mr. Trudeau said many of those now on Canada's unemployment rolls were not heads of families but young people who left school early, people at retirement age who wish to continue working and an increasing number of women.

The broadcast consisted of taped excerpts of an Ottawa interview at which Mr. Webster was one of several newsmen. The interview will be seen in full Sunday night on the CBC network, but Mr. Webster aired his part of the interview in advance on his radio program.

COVERS WATERFRONT

In the interview the prime minister also discussed pay increases for Members of Parliament, the monarchy, the War Measures Act and a wide range of other topics.

He said he did not see unemployment and economic slowdown as the cause of civil disorder in Quebec last October.

There is higher unemployment in the Maritime Provinces, he said. And "there is violence in other parts of the world where the economies are high and moving."

Mr. Trudeau said he did not believe the monarchy was a sore point in relations between French and English Canadians although French Canadians are more "passive" in their loyalty to the Queen.

"The monarchy will last as long as this government lasts," he said. "If you abolish monarchy, what do you replace it with?"

Mr. Trudeau said if he were asked to be president in a parliamentary system the answer would be "quite clearly, 'no.' I'm not interested in symbolic jobs."

DEFENDS RAISE

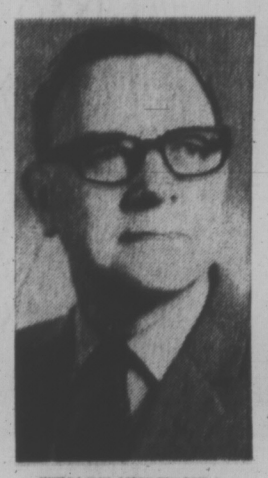
The prime minister defended the raise in salaries of members of Parliament to $18,000 a year from $12,000 — along with a tax free expense allowance of $8,000 — for a total of $26,000.

The 50 per cent increase — the first since 1963 — is less than the increase in professors' and engineers' salaries in the last nine years and about equal to the increase in industrial wages, he said.

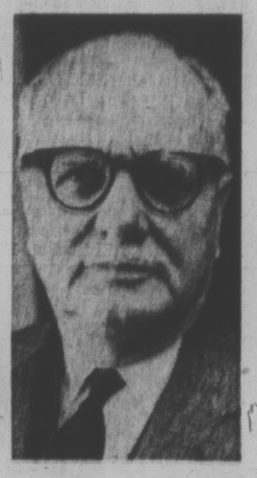
"If constituents think their particular member of Parliament really doesn't earn his salary and really doesn't spend his allowance in an honest way, they should throw him out."

If the salary scale had not been increased, "I am sure we would have lost some of our good members."

Asked if he considered the pay increases badly timed, Mr. Trudeau replied: "Would the timing have been better at the height of the inflationary period when we were telling people to cool it?"



STUART UNDERHILL



W. A. IRWIN

W. A. Irwin Retires; New Publisher Named

W. Arthur Irwin today announced his retirement as publisher of the Victoria Daily Times and vice-president of Victoria Press Ltd. effective June 1. He will be succeeded by Vancouver-born Stuart Underhill, assistant general manager of F. P. Publications and formerly deputy general manager of the Reuter News Agency in London, England.

Irwin joined the Times and Victoria Press in October, 1964, following 11 years in the diplomatic service during which he served successively as Canadian High Commissioner in Australia, Canadian Ambassador to Brazil, Ambassador to Mexico and delegate to the United Nations General Assembly. Prior to going abroad, he was chairman of the National Film Board and prior to that editor of Maclean's Magazine with which he was associated for 25 years. He entered journalism as a reporter for the old Toronto Mail and Empire, subsequently moving to The Globe where he served as parliamentary correspondent and editorial writer.

Stuart Underhill, 56, began his journalistic career with The Canadian Press in Vancouver. Subsequent assignments with the national news agency took him to Toronto, New York and London. His reporting while serving as chief of CP's London bureau won him a National Newspaper Award.

In 1950 Underhill joined Reuter, the international news agency with headquarters in London. His posts with Reuter included those of managing editor and deputy general manager. He returned to Canada last year and after a period in Montreal as assistant publisher of the Financial Times, joined F. P. Publications in Winnipeg as assistant general manager.

Underhill is a son of the late Canon H. J. Underhill and Mrs. Underhill formerly of Vancouver.

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The $10 million addition to the Opportunity for Youth program today probably clinches four environmental projects for 56 youths in the Victoria area.

"They have been approved in principle already and today's announcement makes it look pretty good for official confirmation," said David Anderson (L — Esquimalt-Saanich).

The projects involve Dr. Marcus Bell's Environment 100 organization and three other stream and trail clearing projects proposed by the Amalgamated Conservation Society. (See also Page 3.)

Some 15 jobs for students are involved in the Environment 100 information clearing house to be established in the University of Victoria's Student Union Building.

They will compile environmental packages on specific topics, set up an environmental library and conduct research.

The conservation society, comprising 20 different organizations, has three projects under final consideration here.

The first would put 16 youths to work clearing the West Coast Lifesaving Trail. The second would employ 10 in the Sooke area and 10 more in the San Juan-Cowichan River watersheds improving streams and reclaiming salmon fry.

The third would employ five more planting trees along salmon streams.

The projects are only a portion of the total proposals forwarded from the Victoria area but because of the overwhelming national response to the federal experiment they are the only ones left in the running for approval.

STANFIELD CALLS FOR INCOME TAX CUT

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called today for a cut in federal income taxes of between six and seven per cent.

He also renewed his appeal for removal of the three-percent surtax on personal and corporation income tax and for a big reduction in taxes on building materials.

Bennett Is King Here

The city last fall spent $3,063.42 to make Bennett a freeman of the city.

For the royal visit this month, the city had budgeted only $1,700.

The Bennett affair is one of the more expensive items in the recently-released 1970 sundries and public receptions accounts, which amounted to $32,130.45.

The accounts show an assortment of things paid for by the city, from $9.74 for cigars and $33.50 for parking fines to $159.92 for a cocktail party and $737.68 for Christmas carrolling.

• • •

Most of the city's generosity towards Bennett went to the private, exclusive follow-up to a ceremony which drew a captive audience of a little more than 100 school children and hand-shaking officials.

Invitations for the reception at the Empress cost $102.37. The reception cost $1,641.75. A private reception held later in the day at the Union Club cost $530.94.

Bennett's present, a silver rose bowl, an engraved silver casket, a scroll and flowers cost $666.87. "Arranging flowers in the rose bowl" cost $21.

All in all, this took up most of the public reception account of $4,182.65.

Lesser items were $27 for an inaugural meeting and $159.92 for cocktails at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention last September.

The entire sundries and public reception accounts came to about one-sixth of one per cent of the city's $22,500,000 budget last year.

• • •

Some items are run-of-the-mill expenses such as legal and professional fees and one-shot government expenses like aerial photography, an armored car contract and insurance.

Also included are luncheons, tickets for a Christmas party, in-service course fees, a projector, flowers and chocolates.

The city spent $173.13 on coats-of-arms given to visiting cruise ships, the Salvation Army band and three track teams. Coasters for use by the mayor's office amounted to $80.16.

The city paid $145.53 for flowers sent to various persons; $1,022.17 on courses and society meetings for employees.

A luncheon at the Empress with Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi cost $61.50. One at the Imperial Inn for council cost $58.45.

• • •

Expenses for seven luncheons refunded to city employees amounted to $93.80.

The city's share in the Municipal Finance Authority of B.C. is included in sundries, for $3,212. Roger's Chocolates: 25.

The city employees' annual Christmas carrolling performances, totalling $737.68, included $53.68 for candy canes, $300 for sound equipment, $318 rental for school board buses, $50 for organist and $16 to haul a piano.

If aldermen or employees get parking tickets while on city business because they did not display their parking passes, or because it was not noticed by the ticketer, the city pays the fine.

Ald. Peter Pollen was the big ticket-getter for 1970, with $17.50 in fines. Ald. Ove Witt was second with $10. Fire Chief Eric Simmons and Ald. Harold Olafson each got a $2 ticket. David Groos, Liberal member of Parliament for Victoria, was also allowed a $2 ticket.

This Dam Doesn't Jam

Set in place, rock and sandbag dam was built by 18 students from Colquitz Junior High Sunday on Colquitz Creek by the CNR trestle. Organized by the student council, 10 teen-agers spent Saturday cleaning out part of the creek. Object of dam is to raise water levels, not to shut off water flow.

Ottawa Funds Cool-Aid Farm

Victoria Cool-Aid's $7,500 food farm project has been approved by the federal Opportunities for Youth program.

Cool-Aid worker Laurie Smith said today the agency has been told by the secretary of state department the grant will be given.

He said Cool-Aid expects to get the money by June 1 and immediately will start paying $10 a day to people working the three-acre farm in Saanich.

Smith said Cool-Aid will use new workers every day throughout the summer, but they will be supervised by two full-time staff. The farm will provide food for people staying at Cool-Aid facilities and pocket money for travelling young people.

"WON'T BE HIT'

"It's probably going to make it easier for city welfare," Smith said, "Now they won't be hit by as many kids asking for bus money and money for food."

Several other agencies and municipalities in Greater Victoria do not appear to be as fortunate as Cool-Aid. Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and the Regional District submitted applications for jobs under the government's $15.8 million opportunities program.

Though no official announcements have come from Ottawa, it appears that these projects will not be approved.

Uvic Alma Mater Society president Ian McKinnon said no matter what the outcome of the proposals, a great many students and unemployed young people will be without work this summer.

DEMONSTRATION

As a result, he said, he will soon decide whether to organize a young people's demonstration in Victoria to protest unemployment.

McKinnin said he has just returned from Calgary where students and other young people demonstrated and got the federal government to give more money to Canada Manpower for youth projects.

No militant, McKinnon indicated he will consider all the angles before demonstrating. He said it would look bad if the demonstration occurred before final announcements came from Ottawa.

'CYNICISM'

Ottawa sources have said few municipal projects will be approved, because they do not involve young people in planning and administration. Strict adherence to this policy was made necessary because of the large number of requests.

Curtis said this amounts to "unbelievable mismanagement" of the project. For, he said, if Ottawa did not realize there would be so many applicants when they announced the program, they "simply have no idea of the size of the problem" of youth unemployment.

The mayor said he is more upset by the "cynicism" of the federal government than by the fact that Saanich's proposal likely will not be approved.

"It should be a long time before Canadian students forgive and forget this double-cross by the government," Curtis said.

QUEEN'S NAME MAY REPLACE FOUL BAY

The councils of Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich will consider changing the names of Henderson and Foul Bay Roads to either Queen Elizabeth Way or Queen Elizabeth Road in honor of the royal visit.

The name change is being advocated by Cliff Anderson, 2552 Chelsea, who has received assurance from all three mayors that the suggestion will be fully explored.

He has also received support for the project from the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Roomer Admits Fatal Fire Guilt

By DOUG MacRAE

Keith Alfred Shepherd, 29, was convicted of manslaugher and arson in B.C. Supreme Court today after he changed earlier pleas of not guilty on both counts to guilty.

Shepherd admitted setting a fire in a rooming house last Aug. 6 in which an 82-year-old fellow tenant was killed.

The accused was remanded in custody to June 15 for sentence, before which time Mr. Justice Victor Dryer will see a presentence report and the results of a psychiatric examination.

Shepherd's change of plea in mid-trial constituted an unusual development in Commonwealth law. Only four times in the past 50 years do law books contain reports of higher courts reviewing procedures.

FORMALITY

Since the jury of eight men and four women had already been sworn, Dryer was not empowered to return a verdict himself, but despite Shepherd's admission of guilt he had to direct the jury to go through the formality of deliberating and returning its own verdict.

In his summation prosecutor Louis Lindholm told the jury police officers were called to Coffee Mac's on Gorge Road at 4:30 a.m. Aug. 6.

Lindholm said the accused and two fellow members of Alcoholics Anonymous were waiting for police in the restaurant. Shepherd had told the AA men that he had started the fire but "didn't know how serious it was and wanted someone to talk about it."

'RENT WAS DUE'

When Sergeant Gordon Bennett and Constable Harvey Stevenson entered Shepherd told them "I'm the guy you're looking for ... I lit the fire at 325 Michigan."

"My rent was due and I had drunk my rent money. That's why I lit the fire."

The accuracy of the Crown's statements was voluntarily admitted on behalf of the accused by defence lawyer Dr. J. J. Gow, who was acting under Legal Aid.

Earlier evidence in the trial showed that Shepherd and victim Fred Dewhirst lived in adjoining house-keeping rooms on the third floor at 325 Michigan.

FELL TO GROUND

After a fire was started in the accused's room Dewhirst crawled through his window clung by his fingertips and finally plunged to the ground three floors below.

He died of multiple internal injuries in hospital 18 hours later.

In changing his plea to guilty Shepherd told the court, "My counsel has instructed me as to the consequenes and I am fully aware of what I am doing."

He appeared in court on crutches as a result of leg injuries received in a car accident which had postponed the trail after it had been set at an earlier date.

'Organized Crime' Victimizing Bikers

"Organized crime" has struck the racing bike set, Inspector John Post of Saanich warned this morning.

"We suspect groups of people working together have found theft of 10-speed bicycles to be profitable business," he said.

"If you are offered a 10-speed for an exceptionally low price, or for what appears to be less than a reasonable price for the bicycle you should immediately be suspicious," said the inspector.

★ ★ ★

He urged bicycle owners to make their own identifying mark on their machine and also to learn by heart the serial number to assist police in recovering the vehicle if stolen.

Post estimated four to five bicycles stolen every day in Saanich and said "nine out of 10 times it is due to straight carelessness."

"The value of these machines is going up considerably," he said, "and a theft can represent quite a loss."

Labor to Huddle On Sandringham

A top-level meeting of labor officials will be held in Victoria Wednesday night to plan the next moves in the 224-day strike of employees at Sandringham Private Hospital.

Attending the meeting will be officials of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing the strikers, the B.C. Federation of Labor and the Victoria Labor Council.

Alex Markides, local representative for CUPE, said the meeting will assess the Sandringham strike and determine the next moves following the failure of Labor Minister James Chabot to find a solution.

Chabot talked to officials of the union and National Nursing Homes of Vancouver, which manages Sandringham on behalf of the owners, but said later the government will not intervene.

Plumbers Get Pay Parity

Wage parity between lower Vancouver Island plumbers and their mainland counterparts will be achieved during a new two-year collective agreement, spokesmen for both sides said today.

Seventeen plumbing shops have accepted the new agreement, said R. K. Gervin of Construction Labor Relations Association, Local 324 of the Plumbers' Union, representing 200 men, accepted the agreement earlier.

The agreement provides an increase of $1.29 an hour in four stages over two years on the previous rate of $5.76 an hour.

Settlement also includes increases in employers' contributions to health and welfare (18 cents an hour instead of 16 cents) and pensions (13 cents an hour instead of 7 cents).

ONE MORNING ON A basic training parade ground, a stumblefooted private dropped his rifle while attempting to present arms. Later, the platoon sergeant had a little talk with this miscreant.

"Mayse," he said, "it takes you twice as long as anyone else to learn anything. Then you get the hang of it and do it fine. Then" — and at this point his voice climbed to a wounded roar — "DAMN IF YOU DON'T FORGET HOW!"

Too true; and many a time since that painful episode, these reddening ears have caught an echo of the sergeant's indictment.

There was the day I created an interesting situation by forgetting that a man on a mountain ledge shouldn't get his feet crossed. Regularly each Monday morning, I forget how to type. And at least once each seasn, a skill required of anyone who hooks a trailer to a car deserts me completely.

Which brings us to an evening last week when fate and circumstance combined once again to demonstrate the truth arrived at by that outraged drill sergeant of long ago.

We had sold our travel trailer, a faithful friend, but one for which we didn't anticipate much future use. All that remained was to deliver it to the new owner, whose car wasn't yet rigged for towing.

So I coupled up and off we started.

We jogged along without incident to the street where the trailer was to take up residence. The buyer was standing outside his house.

"Good," he greeted us. "Now, if you'll just back it into my drive . . ."

It was a wide, uncluttered driveway. The street was pretty wide, too. No problem there.

I positioned the rig, and, guided by the big-eyed extension mirrors clamped to the car, began to back.

"You're missing the drive," my wife warned from beside me. Then, urgently, "We're jack-knifing!"

The hex that provoked the sergeant's explosion had struck again. Damn if I hadn't forgotten how to back a trailer.

"Better luck next time," I declared loudly but with no inward conviction.

Next try, the luck was not better. If anything, it was worse.

"Happens to all of us once in a while, heh, heh," I croaked to the buyer, who had hopped aside just in time. "I'd better drive around the block and take another pass at it."

While we were squaring the block, I explained to Win — and to myself — that there was nothing to backing a trailer. You merely place a hand on the lower arc of the steering wheel, and nudge the car's stern in the direction opposite to the one you would have those trailer wheels go. A familiar drill, and did she remember that time in the Cowichan bottomlands when we'd really had to thread the needle?

I interrupted this pep-talk to turn us into a block that in theory would complete our square. We were well along it when Win spoke.

"Funny," she said' "I didn't notice any sign. But I think we're in a dead end."

"You're kidding" I said.

But she wasn't, and no-through-road is no road at all for a man who has forgotten how to back a trailer. This I proceeded to demonstrate.

We tacked and yawed. The hex dug its claws deeper. A little dog appeared and began to bark, as who could blame him. Although she has been kind enough not to remind me of it, I have a vague recollection snarling at my dear one.

People came out of their houses. After all, it isn't every day that some idiot manages to block your nice, quiet street by plunking a car and trailer across it.

Everyone was very nice. Presently rescue turned up in the person of a trailer-piloting householder who hadn't forgotten how to back a rig.

In a single, neat pass, he straightened us away, and we got out of there.

We returned to where the purchaser, considerably mystified, was waiting to take possession. The hex eased to the point where I managed to back any old how into the mouth of his drive.

We unhitched and headed for home.

"You know," I said to my long-suffering companion, "that was almost as bad as the time I dropped my rifle on parade."

Prices Up Again For Homes, Food

AUSTRALIA SEEKING PEKING DIALOGUE

CANBERRA (Reuter) — Prime Minister William McMahon announced tonight plans to seek a dialogue with Peking after Oppositoin Labor leader Gough Whitlam had revealed he hopes to visit China next month.

McMahon said in a statement that his cabinet had come to this decision after noting the rapid succession of events suggesting a marked development in the willingness of China to deal with the rest of the world.

Living Costs Rise 32% Since 1961

OTTAWA — The average family's cost of living is approaching a level a third higher than it was 10 years ago, following a jump in April of nearly a full point in the consumer price index.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today that the index last month was 132.2, up 0.9 of a point from March and 2.5 points higher than a year ago.

For every $100 spent on food, housing, clothing and other consumer expenditures in 1961, the same goods and services last month cost $132.20. The bill will probably exceed $133.30 later this spring.

In computing its index, the bureau surveys the prices of about 300 consumer goods and services ranging from rents and new house prices to foods, beauty treatments and bicycles.

In the survey clothing, housing and food prices led the increase which the bureau said was about average for the last five years.

Under questioning by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield he said that the government had not taken the position that inflation had been licked "once and for all".

Stanfield said it was "the shortest licking in history."

In percentage terms, the index last month was 1.9 per cent higher than a year earlier — just under the two-per-cent annual rate of price increase many economists say is the borderline to inflation.

The gain for the month was seven-tenths of one per cent, compared with a March-to-April increase of six-tenths of one per cent last year.

The main increases were nine-tenths of one per cent in both the housing and clothing segments of the over-all index, which together make up more than 40 per cent of it. The food index, accounting for more than 25 per cent of the over-all index, rose seven-tenths of one per cent.

DOLLAR THE SAME

The over-all change in the price index for April, however, was insufficient to change the bureau's calculation of the current purchasing power of the 1961 consumer dollar. It remained at 76 cents, unchanged from March and down one cent from 77 cents in April, 1970.

U.K. Farm Offer Goes to Market

BRUSSELS (CP) — Geoffrey Rippon of Britain opened a major Common Market negotiating session today with a new proposal on adapting British farming to the system in the European Economic Community.

Rippon, leading the negotiations for British entry into the six-nation Common Market, called the morning meeting "very satisfactory."

Farm policy is a matter of critical importance to Canada and other Commonwealth countries which have had preferred access to the British market over the years and now stand to lose it.

A British spokesman said that he believes progress can be made on the farm question and also on these matters:

● Britain's membership in the European Atomic Energy Organization — known as Euratom — which is the market's organization for the peaceful use of nuclear energy.

● Free entry into Britain of limited quantities of some industrial products from countries outside the market. This would include aluminum oxide from Canada.

The market is expected to make a new offer to Britain on this question.

Dollar Firm, Pound Hit

From AP-Reuter

A strong demand for the U.S. dollar built up on the London foreign exchange market today as speculators rushed to cover the dollars they sold short last week to buy West German marks. The pound sterling was under persistent selling.

There was no evidence the speculators were selling marks or Swiss francs to take their profits from the increased value of those currencies. They seemed to be holding on to them in the hope of even bigger profits.

As a result, the pound was hit by selling described as persistent but not hectic. The pound opened at $2.41745, fractionally higher than Monday's close, but soon slid off to $2.4165, its lowest point in weeks.

INDIAN STORY BLASTED

The amount of publicity given to one drunken Indian at a royal tour event at Sandspit in the Queen Charlottes amounts to a "mis-use of journalism," Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said today.

Campbell, speaking as chairman of the provincial fund to aid Indian development, said the "over-emphasis" on the incident was indicative of "the idea that every Indian is a drunken Indian.

The incident occurred Monday when a Haida Indian dancer fell down in view of the royal family and had to be guided from the scene.

State Dinner, Fireworks Will End Royal Tour

After a scheduled arrival in the Inner Harbor on board the Britannia at 3:30 this afternoon, the royal party will leave the yacht for a state dinner at Government House tonight at 7:30 p.m.

The quick drive will proceed east on Belleville, north on Government, east on Fort, north on Douglas, east on Pandora, south on Cook, east on Rockland to Government House.

At the dinner the Queen will deliver a nationally-televised address at 9 p.m. on CTV and 9:30 p.m. on CBC.

Last chance to see the Queen in Victoria will be when she returns to Britannia soon after 10:30 p.m. for the overnight sail to Vancouver.

The royal yacht is scheduled to leave the harbor at 11 p.m. There will be a big fireworks display as a farewell as the Britannia steams past Beacon Hill Park at 11:15 p.m.

The royal party leaves by air for London on Wednesday from Vancouver.

ROYAL APLOMB

The formal state dinner tonight follows a light-hearted day in Prince Rupert and the Queen Charlottes Monday.

One drunk caused brief embarrassment—this was at Sandspit—but the minor flutter was handled with royal aplomb on one hand and discretion by the RCMP on the other.

It was a terrible embarrassment to the Haida Indians because he was one of their dancers—or should have been—and it was impossible for the Queen not to see him.

Some residents of Cumberland, a small town just south of Courtenay, were upset Monday that the Queen's visit to their town had been cancelled.

Officials said a lack of time forced the removal of Cumberland from the royal itinerary but one resident, Mrs. Ellen Miller, 82, called it the "dirtiest trick" that had ever been played on her. Cumberland mayor Bill Monerief turned down an invitation to meet the royal family at Comox, saying the issue had been already too controversial and that he did not waht to spoil the Queen's tour.

Premier and Mrs. Bennett were happy guests aboard the Britannia Monday and today after receiving an apparently unexpected invitation from the Queen and Prince Philip. They spent the day cruising in the Strait of Georgia with the roal family after boarding Britannia at Comox.

Union Pickets B.C. Legislature

For the first time in 14 years, a picket line was thrown up in front of the legislative buildings today by the B.C. government Employees Union.

It was an information picket by government electricians seeking higher wages. It lasted for half an hour at noon today.

The action preceded the union's second round of wage negotiations with the civil service commission beginning at 3 p.m.

SEEK $08 MORE

The electricians are currently receiving $865 a month and are seeking $963. Their demands are based on wages paid to electricians employed by other public agencies, an official said.

B.C. Hydro pays $917 a month, major hospitals $971, lower mainland municipalities $899 and the construction industry $1,064, the official said.

INJUNCTION

The pickets, also set up at the Civil Service Commission office at 544 Michigan Street and a number of government offices throughout the province.

Picketing of government buildings is illegal but a deputy public works minister, Arnold Webb, said he didn't know whether any action likely by injunction would be taken if the picketing is only for a short period.

Webb said the first he heard of the picketing was this morning from a reporter.

ROLLS-ROYCE, LOCKHEED REACH TERMS

LONDON (Reuter) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. of the United States signed a conditional contract with Rolls-Royce today to buy RB211 engines from the British firm for the Tri-Star airbus.

The contract is conditional upon obtaining approval of the U.S. Congress, needed for a U.S. government guarantee for the $250 million in bank loans that Lockheed wants to continue the airbus project.

The contract marks a major step in the series of negotiations that have gone on since the financial collapse of Rolls-Royce in February.

PM 'Accepts Blame' For Unemployment

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The federal government accepts the blame for high unemployment in Canada, Prime Minister Trudeau said in a radio interview Monday.

Mr. Trudeau told interviewer Jack Webster he regretted the high unemployment but said inflation with high employment was not an acceptable alternative to no inflation with high unemployment.

"If we could live with inflation and have a booming economy and more employment, that would be great."

But 50 per cent of Canada's produce now goes into export markets and "if we let inflation run away in Canada we will lose our markets and the workers who try to produce for those markets will be out of a job."

Mr. Trudeau said many of those now on Canada's unemployment rolls were not heads of families but young people who left school early, people at retirement age who wish to continue working and an increasing number of women.

The broadcast consisted of taped excerpts of an Ottawa interview at which Mr. Webster was one of several newsmen. The interview will be seen in full Sunday night on the CBC network, but Mr. Webster aired his part of the interview in advance on his radio program.

COVERS WATERFRONT

In the interview the prime minister also discussed pay increases for members of Parliament, the monarchy, the War Measures Act and a wide range of other topics.

He said he did not see unemployment and economic slowdown as the cause of civil disorder in Quebec last October.

There is higher unemployment in the Maritime provinces, he said. And "there is violence in other parts of the world where the economies are high and moving."

Mr. Trudeau said he did not believe the monarchy was a sore point in relations between French and English Canadians although French Canadians are more "passive" in their loyalty to the Queen.

"The monarchy will last as long as this government lasts," he said. "If you abolish monarchy, what do you replace it with?"

Mr. Trudeau said if he were asked to be president in a parliamentary system the answer would be "quite clearly, 'no.' I'm not interested in symbolic jobs."

DEFENDS RAISE

The prime minister defended the raise in salaries of members of Parliament to $18,000 a year from $12,000 along with a tax free expense allowance of $8,000 — for a total of $26,000.

The 50 per cent increase, the first since 1963—is less than the increase in professors' and engineers' salaries in the last nine years and about equal to the increase in industrial wages, he said.

"If constituents think their particular member of Parliament really doesn't earn his salary and really doesn't spend his allowance in an honest way, they should throw him out."

If the salary scale had not been increased, "I am sure we would have lost some of our good members."

Asked if he considered the pay increases badly timed, Mr. Trudeau replied: "Would the timing have been better at the height of the inflationary period when we were telling people to cool it?"

STUART UNDERHILL

W. A. IRWIN

W. A. Irwin Retires; New Publisher Named

W. Arthur Irwin today announced his retirement as publisher of the Victoria Daily Times and vice-president of Victoria Press Ltd. effective June 1. He will be succeeded by Vancouver-born Stuart Underhill, assistant general manager of F. P. Publications and formerly deputy general manager of the Reuter News Agency in London, England.

Irwin joined the Times and Victoria Press in October, 1964, following 11 years in the diplomatic service during which he served successively as Canadian High Commissioner in Australia, Canadian Ambassador to Brazil, Ambassador to Mexico and delegate to the United Nations General Assembly. Prior to going abroad, he was chairman of the National Film Board and prior to that editor of Maclean's Magazine with which he was associated for 25 years. He entered journalism as a reporter for the old Toronto Mail and Empire, subsequently moving to The Globe where he served as parliamentary correspondent and editorial writer.

Stuart Underhill, 56, began his journalistic career with The Canadian Press in Vancouver. Subsequent assignments with the national news agency took him to Toronto, New York and London. His reporting while serving as chief of CP's London bureau won him a National Newspaper Award.

In 1959 Underhill joined Reuter, the international news agency with headquarters in London. His posts with Reuter included those of managing editor and deputy general manager. He returned to Canada last year and after a period in Montreal as assistant publisher of the Financial Times, joined F. P. Publications in Winnipeg as assistant general manager.

Underhill is a son of the late Canon H. J. Underhill and Mrs. Underhill formerly of Vancouver.

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The $10 million addition to the Opportunity for Youth program today probably clinches four environmental projects for 56 youths in the Victoria area.

"They have been approved in principle already and today's announcement makes it look pretty good for official confirmation," said David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich).

The projects involve Dr. Marcus Bell's Environment 100 organization and three other stream and trail clearing projects proposed by the Amalgamated Conservation Society. (See also Page 13.)

Some 15 jobs for students are involved in the Environment 100 information clearing house to be established in the University of Victoria's Student Union Building.

The conservation society, comprising 20 different organizations, has three projects under final consideration here.

The first would put 16 youths to work clearing the West Coast Lifesaving Trail. The second would employ 10 in the Sooke area and 10 more in the San Juan-Cowichan River watersheds improving streams and reclaiming salmon fry.

The third would employ five more planting trees along salmon streams.

The projects are only a portion of the total proposals forwarded from the Victoria area but because of the overwhelming national response to the federal experiment they are the only ones left in the running for approval.

STANFIELD CALLS FOR INCOME TAX CUT

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called today for a cut in federal income taxes of between six and seven per cent.

He also renewed his appeal for removal of the three-percent surtax on personal and corporation income tax and for a big reduction in taxes on building materials.

Bennett Is King Here

The city last fall spent $3,063.42 to make Bennett a freeman of the city.

For the royal visit this month, Greater Victoria budgeted only $1,700 of which only 40 per cent was paid by the city.

The Bennett affair is one of the more expensive items in the recently-released 1970 sundries and public receptions accounts, which amounted to $32,130.45.

The accounts show an assortment of things paid for by the city, from $9.74 for cigars and $33.50 for parking fines to $159.92 for a cocktail party and $737.68 for Christmas carolling.

• • •

Most of the city's generosity towards Bennett went to the private, exclusive follow-up to a ceremony which drew a captive audience of a little more than 100 school children and hand-shaking officials.

Invitations for the reception at the Empress cost $102.37. The reception cost $1,641.75. A private reception held later in the day at the Union Club cost $530.94.

Bennett's present, a silver rose bowl, an engraved silver casket, a scroll and flowers cost $666.87. "Arranging flowers in the rose bowl" cost $21.

All in all, this took up most of the public reception account of $4,182.65.

Lesser items were $27 for an inaugural meeting and $159.92 for cocktails at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention last September.

The entire sundries and public reception accounts came to about one-sixth of one per cent of the city's $22,500,000 budget last year.

• • •

Some items are run-of-the-mill expenses such as legal and professional fees and one-shot government expenses like aerial photography, an armored car contract and insurance.

Also included are luncheons, tickets for a Christmas party, in-service course fees, a projector, flowers and chocolates.

The city spent $173.13 on coats-of-arms given to visiting cruise ships, the Salvation Army band and three track teams. Coasters for use by the mayor's office amounted to $80.16.

The city paid $145.53 for flowers sent to various persons; $1,022.17 on courses and society meetings for employees.

• • •

Expenses for seven luncheons refunded to city employees amounted to $93.80.

The city's share in the Municipal Finance Authority of B.C. is included in sundries, for $3,212. Roger's Chocolates: 25

The city employees' annual Christmas carolling performances, totalling $737.68, included $53.68 for candy canes, $300 for sound equipment, $318 rental for school board buses, $50 for organist and $16 to haul a piano.

If aldermen or employees get parking tickets while on city business, because they did not display their parking passes, or because it was not noticed by the ticketer, the city pays the fine.

Ald. Peter Pollen was the big ticket-getter for 1970, with $17.50 in fines. Ald. Ove Witt was second with $10. Fire Chief Eric Simmons and Ald. Harold Olafson each got a $2 ticket. David Groos, Liberal member of Parliament for Victoria, was also allowed a $2 ticket.

Set in place, rock and sandbag dam was built by 18 students from Colquitz Junior High Sunday on Colquitz Creek by the CNR trestle. Organized by the student council, 10 teenagers spent Saturday cleaning out part of the creek. Object of dam is to raise water levels, not to shut off water flow.

Ottawa Funds Cool-Aid Farm

Victoria Cool-Aid's $7,500 food farm project has been approved by the federal Opportunities for Youth program.

Cool-Aid worker Laurie Smith said today the agency has been told by the secretary of state department the grant will be given.

He said Cool-Aid expects to get the money by June 1 and immediately will start paying $10 a day to people working the three-acre farm in Saanich.

Smith said Cool-Aid will use new workers every day throughout the summer, but they will be supervised by two full-time staff. The farm will provide food for people staying at Cool-Aid facilities and pocket money for travelling young people.

"WON'T BE HIT"

"It's probably going to make it easier for city welfare," Smith said, "Now they won't be hit by as many kids asking for bus money and money for food."

Several other agencies and municipalities in Greater Victoria do not appear to be as fortunate as Cool-Aid, Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and the Regional District submitted applications for jobs under the government's $15.8 million opportunities program.

Though no official announcements have come from Ottawa, it appears that these projects will not be approved.

Uvic Alma Mater Society president Ian McKinnon said no matter what the outcome of the proposals, a great many students and unemployed young people will be without work this summer.

DEMONSTRATION

As a result, he said, he will soon decide whether to organize a young people's demonstration in Victoria to protest unemployment.

McKinnon said he has just returned from Calgary where students and other young people demonstrated and got the federal government to give more money to Canada Manpower for youth projects.

No militant, McKinnon indicated he will consider all the angles before demonstrating. He said it would look bad if the demonstration occurred before final announcements came from Ottawa.

'CYNICISM'

Ottawa sources have said few municipal projects will be approved, because they do not involve young people in planning and administration. Strict adherence to this policy was made necessary because of the large number of requests.

Curtis said this amounts to "unbelievable mismanagement" of the project. For, he said, if Ottawa did not realize there would be so many applicants when they announced the program, they "simply have no idea of the size of the problem" of youth unemployment.

The mayor said he is more upset by the "cynicism" of the federal government than by the fact that Saanich's proposal likely will not be approved.

"It should be a long time before Canadian students forgive and forget this double-cross by the government," Curtis said.

QUEEN'S NAME MAY REPLACE FOUL BAY

The councils of Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich will consider changing the names of Henderson and Foul Bay Roads to either Queen Elizabeth Way or Queen Elizabeth Road in honor of the royal visit.

The name change is being advocated by Cliff Anderson, 2552 Chelsea, who has received assurance from all three mayors that the suggestion will be fully explored.

He has also received support for the project from the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Roomer Admits Fatal Fire Guilt

By DOUG MacRAE

Keith Alfred Shepherd, 29, was convicted of manslaughter and arson in B.C. Supreme Court today after he changed earlier pleas of not guilty on both counts to guilty.

Shepherd admitted setting a fire in a rooming house last Aug. 6 in which an 82-year-old fellow tenant was killed.

The accused was remanded in custody to June 15 for sentence, before which time Mr. Justice Victor Dryer will see a presentence report and the results of a psychiatric examination.

Shepherd's change of plea in mid-trial constituted an unusual development in Commonwealth law. Only four times in the past 50 years do law books contain reports of higher courts reviewing procedures of this type.

FORMALITY

Since the jury of eight men and four women had already been sworn, Dryer was not empowered to return a verdict himself, but despite Shepherd's admission of guilt he had to direct the jury to go through the formality of deliberating and returning its own verdict.

In his summation, prosecutor Louis Lindholm told the jury police officers were called to Coffee Mac's on Gorge Road at 4:30 a.m. Aug. 6.

Lindholm said the accused and two fellow members of Alcoholics Anonymous were waiting for police in the restaurant. Shepherd had told the AA men that he had started the fire but "didn't know how serious it was and wanted someone to talk to about it."

'RENT WAS DUE'

When Sergeant Gordon Bennett and Constable Harvey Stevenson entered, Shepherd told them, "I'm the guy you're looking for . . . I lit the fire at 325 Michigan."

"My rent was due and I had drunk my rent money. That's why I lit the fire."

The accuracy of the Crown's statements was voluntarily admitted on behalf of the accused by defence lawyer Dr. J. J. Gow, who was acting under Legal Aid.

Earlier evidence in the trial showed that Shepherd and victim Fred Dewhirst lived in adjoining house-keeping rooms on the third floor at 325 Michigan.

FELL TO GROUND

After a fire was started in the accused's room Dewhirst crawled through his window, clung by his fingertips and finally plunged to the ground three floors below.

He died of multiple internal injuries in hospital 18 hours later.

In changing his plea to guilty Shepherd told the court, "My counsel has instructed me as to the consequences and I am fully aware of what I am doing."

He appeared in court on crutches as a result of leg injuries received in a car accident which had postponed the trial after it had been set at an earlier date.

'Organized Crime' Victimizing Bikers

"Organized crime" has struck the racing bike set, Inspector John Post of Saanich warned this morning.

"We suspect groups of people working together have found theft of 10-speed bicycles to be profitable business," he said.

Post said the bikes are stolen, quickly repainted and then sold at lower prices to unsuspecting people.

"If you are offered a 10-speed for an exceptionally low price, or for what appears to be less than a reasonable price for the bicycle you should immediately be suspicious," said the inspector.

★ ★ ★

He urged bicycle owners to make their own identifying mark on their machine and also to learn by heart the serial number to assist police in recovering the vehicle if stolen.

Post estimated four to five bicycles stolen every day in Saanich and said "nine out of 10 times it is due to straight carelessness."

"The value of these machines is going up considerably," he said, "and a theft can represent quite a loss."

Labor to Huddle On Sandringham

A top-level meeting of labor officials will be held in Victoria Wednesday night to plan the next moves in the 224-day strike of employees at Sandringham Private Hospital.

Attending the meeting will be officials of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, representing the strikers, the B.C. Federation of Labor and the Victoria Labor Council.

Alex Markides, local representative for CUPE, said the meeting will assess the Sandringham strike and determine the next moves following the failure of Labor Minister James Chabot to find a solution.

Chabot talked to officials of the union and National Nursing Homes of Vancouver, which manages Sandringham on behalf of the owners, but said later the government will not intervene.

The private hospital, at 1650 Fort, has continued operations by hiring replacements for the women who went on strike seeking a first contract with the company.

Plumbers Get Pay Parity

Wage parity between lower Vancouver Island plumbers and their mainland counterparts will be achieved during a new two-year collective agreement, spokesmen for both sides said today.

Seventeen plumbing shops have accepted the new agreement, said R. K. Gervin of Construction Labor Relations Association. Local 324 of the Plumbers' Union, representing 200 men, accepted the agreement earlier.

The agreement provides an increase of $1.29 an hour in four stages over two years on the previous rate of $5.76 an hour.

Settlement also includes increases in employers' contributions to health and welfare (18 cents an hour instead of 16 cents) and pensions (13 cents an hour instead of 7 cents).

arthur mayse

ONE MORNING ON A basic training parade ground, a stumblefooted private dropped his rifle while attempting to present arms. Later, the platoon sergeant had a little talk with this miscreant.

"Mayse," he said, "it takes you twice as long as anyone else to learn anything. Then you get the hang of it and do it fine. Then" — and at this point his voice climbed to a wounded roar — "DAMN IF YOU DON'T FORGET HOW!"

Too true; and many a time since that painful episode, these reddening ears have caught an echo of the sergeant's indictment.

There was the day I created an interesting situation by forgetting that a man on a mountain ledge shouldn't get his feet crossed. Regularly each Monday morning, I forget how to type. And at least once each season, a skill required of anyone who hooks a trailer to a car deserts me completely.

So I coupled up and off we started.

We jogged along without incident to the street where the trailer was to take up residence. The buyer was standing outside his house.

"Good," he greeted us. "Now, if you'll just back it into my drive . . ."

It was a wide, uncluttered driveway. The street was pretty wide, too. No problem there.

I positioned the rig, and, guided by the big-eyed extension mirrors clamped to the car, began to back.

"You're missing the drive," my wife warned from beside me. Then, urgently, "We're jack-knifing!"

The hex that provoked the sergeant's explosion had struck again. Damn if I hadn't forgotten how to back a trailer.

"Better luck next time," I declared loudly but with no inward conviction.

Next try, the luck was not better. If anything, it was worse.

"Happens to all of us once in a while, heh, heh," I croaked to the buyer, who had hopped aside just in time. "I'd better drive around the block and take another pass at it."

While we were squaring the block, I explained to Win — and to myself — that there was nothing to backing a trailer. You merely place a hand on the lower arc of the steering wheel, and nudge the car's stern in the direction opposite to the one you would have those trailer wheels go. A familiar drill, and did she remember that time in the Cowichan bottomlands when we'd really had to thread the needle?

I interrupted this pep-talk to turn us into a block that in theory would complete our square. We were well along it when Win spoke.

"Funny," she said' "I didn't notice any sign. But I think we're in a dead end."

"You're kidding" I said.

But she wasn't, and no through-road is no road at all for a man who has forgotten how to back a trailer. This I proceeded to demonstrate.

We tacked and yawed. The hex dug its claws deeper. A little dog appeared and began to bark, as who could blame him. Although she has been kind enough not to remind me of it, I have a vague recollection snarling at my dear one.

People came out of their houses. After all, it isn't every day that some idiot manages to block your nice, quiet street by plunking a car and trailer across it.

Everyone was very nice. Presently rescue turned up in the person of a trailer-piloting householder who hadn't forgotten how to back a rig.

In a single, neat pass, he straightened us away, and we got out of there.

We returned to where the purchaser, considerably mystified, was waiting to take possession. The hex eased to the point where I managed to back any old how into the mouth of his drive.

We unhitched and headed for home.

"You know," I said to my long-suffering companion, "that was almost as bad as the time I dropped my rifle on parade."

And loud and clear across the years, I could hear the sergeant roaring!

AUSTRALIA SEEKING PEKING DIALOGUE

CANBERRA (Reuter) — Prime Minister William McMahon announced tonight plans to seek a dialogue with Peking after Oppositoin Labor leader Gough Whitlam had revealed he hopes to visit China next month.

McMahon said in a statement that his cabinet had come to this decision after noting the rapid succession of events suggesting a marked development in the willingness of China to deal with the rest of the world.

U.K. Farm Offer Goes to Market

BRUSSELS (CP) — Geoffrey Rippon of Britain opened a major Common Market negotiating session today with a new proposal on adapting British farming to the system in the European Economic Community.

Rippon, leading the negotiations for British entry into the six-nation Common Market, called the morning meeting "very satisfactory."

Farm policy is a matter of critical importance to Canada and other Commonwealth countries which have had preferred access to the British market over the years and now stand to lose it.

A British spokesman said that he believes progress can be made on the farm question and also on these matters:

- Britain's membership in the European Atomic Energy Organization — known as Euratom — which is the market's organization for the peaceful use of nuclear energy.
- Free entry into Britain of limited quantities of some industrial products from countries outside the market. This would include aluminum oxide from Canada.

The market is expected to make a new offer to Britain on this question.

Dollar Firm, Pound Hit

From AP-Reuter

A strong demand for the U.S. dollar built up on the London foreign exchange market today as speculators rushed to cover the dollars they sold short last week to buy West German marks. The pound sterling was under persistent selling.

There was no evidence the speculators were selling marks or Swiss francs to take their profits from the increased value of those currencies. They seemed to be holding on to them in the hope of even bigger profits.

As a result, the pound was hit by selling described as persistent but not hectic. The pound opened at $2.41745, fractionally higher than Monday's close, but soon slid off to $2.4165, its lowest point in weeks.

32% Increase In 10 Years

OTTAWA — The average family's cost of living is approaching a level a third higher than it was 10 years ago, following a jump in April of nearly a full point in the consumer price index.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today that the index last month was 132.2, up 0.9 of a point from March and 2.5 points higher than a year ago.

For every $100 spent on food, housing, clothing and other consumer expenditures in 1961, the same goods and services last month cost $132.20. The bill will probably exceed $133.30 later this spring.

In computing its index, the bureau surveys the prices of about 300 consumer goods and services ranging from rents and new house prices to foods, beauty treatments and bicycles.

In the survey clothing, housing and food prices led the increase which the bureau said was about average for the last five years.

Under questioning by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield he said that the government had not taken the position that inflation had been licked "once and for all".

Stanfield said it was "the shortest licking in history."

In percentage terms, the index last month was 1.9 per cent higher than a year earlier — just under the two-per-cent annual rate of price increase many economists say is the borderline to inflation.

The gain for the month was seven-tenths of one per cent, compared with a March-to-April increase of six-tenths of one per cent last year.

The main increases were nine-tenths of one per cent in both the housing and clothing segments of the over-all index, which together make up more than 40 per cent of it. The food index, accounting for more than 25 per cent of the over-all index, rose seven-tenths of one per cent.

DOLLAR THE SAME

The over-all change in the price index for April, however, was insufficient to change the bureau's calculation of the current purchasing power of the 1961 consumer dollar. It remained at 76 cents, unchanged from March and down one cent from 77 cents in April, 1970.

PM 'Accepts Blame' For Unemployment

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — The federal government accepts the blame for high unemployment in Canada, Prime Minister Trudeau said in a radio interview Monday.

Mr. Trudeau told interviewer Jack Webster he regretted the high unemployment but said inflation with high employment was not an acceptable alternative to no inflation with high unemployment.

"If we could live with inflation and have a booming economy and more employment, that would be great."

But 50 per cent of Canada's produce now goes into export markets and "if we let inflation run away in Canada we will lose our markets and the workers who try to produce for those markets will be out of a job."

Mr. Trudeau said many of those now on Canada's unemployment rolls were not heads of families but young people who left school early, people at retirement age who wish to continue working and an increasing number of women.

The broadcast consisted of taped excerpts of an Ottawa interview at which Mr. Webster was one of several newsmen. The interview will be seen in full Sunday night on the CBC network, but Mr. Webster aired his part of the interview in advance on his radio program.

COVERS WATERFRONT

In the interview the prime minister also discussed pay increases for members of Parliament, the monarchy, the War Measures Act and a wide range of other topics.

He said he did not see unemployment and economic slowdown as the cause of civil disorder in Quebec last October.

There is higher unemployment in the Maritime provinces, he said. And "there is violence in other parts of the world where the economies are high and moving."

Mr. Trudeau said he did not believe the monarchy was a sore point in relations between French and English Canadians although French Canadians are more "passive" in their loyalty to the Queen.

"The monarchy will last as long as this government lasts," he said. "If you abolish monarchy, what do you replace it with?"

Mr. Trudeau said if he were asked to be president in a parliamentary system the answer would be "quite clearly, 'no.' I'm not interested in symbolic jobs."

DEFENDS RAISE

The prime minister defended the raise in salaries of members of Parliament to $18,000 a year from $12,000 along with a tax free expense allowance of $8,000 — for a total of $26,000.

The 50 per cent increase — the first since 1963 — is less than the increase in professors' and engineers' salaries in the last nine years and about equal to the increase in industrial wages, he said.

"If constituents think their particular member of Parliament really doesn't earn his salary and really doesn't spend his allowance in an honest way, they should throw him out."

If the salary scale had not been increased, "I am sure we would have lost some of our good members."

Asked if he considered the pay increases badly timed, Mr. Trudeau replied: "Would the timing have been better at the height of the inflationary period when we were telling people to cool it?"

INDIAN STORY BLASTED

The amount of publicity given to one drunken Indian at a royal tour event at Sandspit in the Queen Charlottes amounts to a "mis-use of journalism," Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said today.

Campbell, speaking as chairman of the provincial fund to aid Indian development, said the "over-emphasis" on the incident was indicative of "the idea that every Indian is a drunken Indian.

The incident occurred Monday when a Haida Indian dancer fell down in view of the royal family and had to be guided from the scene.

State Dinner, Fireworks Will End Royal Tour

After a scheduled arrival in the Inner Harbor on board the Britannia at 3:30 this afternoon, the royal party will leave the yacht for a state dinner at Government House tonight at 7:30 p.m.

The quick drive will proceed east on Belleville, north on Government, east on Fort, north on Douglas, east on Pandora, south on Cook, east on Rockland to Government House.

At the dinner the Queen will deliver a nationally-televised address at 9 p.m. on CTV and 9:30 p.m. on CBC.

Last chance to see the Queen in Victoria will be when she returns to Britannia soon after 10:30 p.m. for the overnight sail to Vancouver.

The royal yacht is scheduled to leave the harbor at 11 p.m. There will be a big fireworks display as a farewell as the Britannia steams past Beacon Hill Park at 11:15 p.m.

The royal party leaves by air for London on Wednesday from Vancouver.

The formal state dinner tonight follows a light-hearted day in Prince Rupert and the Queen Charlottes Monday.

One drunk caused brief embarrassment—this was at Sandspit—but the minor flutter was handled with royal aplomb on one hand and discretion by the RCMP on the other.

It was a terrible embarrassment to the Haida Indians because he was one of their dancers—or should have been—and it was impossible for the Queen not to see him.

Some residents of Cumberland, a small town just south of Courtenay, were upset Monday that the Queen's visit to their town had been cancelled.

Officials said a lack of time forced the removal of Cumberland from the royal itinerary but one resident, Mrs. Ellen Miller, 82, called it the "dirtiest trick" that had ever been played on her. Cumberland mayor Bill Monkcrief turned down an invitation to meet the royal family at Comox, saying the issue had been already too controversial and that he did not want to spoil the Queen's tour.

Premier and Mrs. Bennett were happy guests aboard the Britannia Monday and today after receiving an apparently unexpected invitation from the Queen and Prince Philip. They spent the day cruising in the Strait of Georgia with the roal family after boarding Britannia at Comox.

Union Pickets B.C. Legislature

For the first time in 14 years, a picket line was thrown up in front of the legislative buildings today by the B.C. government Employees Union.

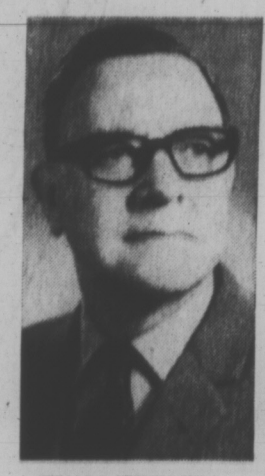
It was an information picket by government electricians seeking higher wages. It lasted for half an hour at noon today.

The action preceded the union's second round of wage negotiations with the civil service commission beginning at 3 p.m.

The last time the government employees' organization threw up pickets at the building was in 1957 during an abortive strike, a union official said.

The electricians are currently receiving $865 a month and are seeking $963. Their demands are based on wages paid to electricians employed by other public agencies, an official said.

The pickets, also set up at the Civil Service Commission office at 544 Michigan Street and a number of government offices throughout the province.



STUART UNDERHILL

W. A. IRWIN

W. A. Irwin Retires; New Publisher Named

W. Arthur Irwin today announced his retirement as publisher of the Victoria Daily Times and vice-president of Victoria Press Ltd. effective June 1. He will be succeeded by Vancouver-born Stuart Underhill, assistant general manager of F. P. Publications and formerly deputy general manager of the Reuter News Agency in London, England.

Irwin joined the Times and Victoria Press in October, 1964, following 11 years in the diplomatic service during which he served successively as Canadian High Commissioner in Australia, Canadian Ambassador to Brazil, Ambassador to Mexico and delegate to the United Nations General Assembly. Prior to going abroad, he was chairman of the National Film Board and prior to that editor of Maclean's Magazine with which he was associated for 25 years. He entered journalism as a reporter for the old Toronto Mail and Empire, subsequently moving to The Globe where he served as parliamentary correspondent and editorial writer.

Stuart Underhill, 56, began his journalistic career with The Canadian Press in Vancouver. Subsequent assignments with the national news agency took him to Toronto, New York and London. His reporting while serving as chief of CP's London bureau won him a National Newspaper Award.

In 1950 Underhill joined Reuter, the international news agency with headquarters in London. His posts with Reuter included those of managing editor and deputy general manager. He returned to Canada last year and after a period in Montreal as assistant publisher of the Financial Times, joined F. P. Publications in Winnipeg as assistant general manager.

Underhill is a son of the late Canon H. J. Underhill and Mrs. Underhill formerly of Vancouver.

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The $10 million addition to the Opportunity for Youth program today probably clinches four environmental projects for 56 youths in the Victoria area.

"They have been approved in principle already and today's announcement makes it look pretty good for official confirmation," said David Anderson (L — Esquimalt-Saanich).

The projects involve Dr. Marcus Bell's Environment 100 organization and three other stream and trail clearing projects proposed by the Amalgamated Conservation Society. (See also Page 13.)

Some 15 jobs for students are involved in the Environment 100 information clearing house to be established in the University of Victoria's Student Union Building.

They will compile environmental packages on specific topics, set up an environmental library and conduct research.

The conservation society, comprising 20 different organizations, has three projects under final consideration here.

The first would put 16 youths to work clearing the West Coast Lifesaving Trail. The second would employ 10 in the Sooke area and 10 more in the San Juan-Cowichan River watersheds improving streams and reclaiming salmon fry.

The third would employ five more planting trees along salmon streams.

The projects are only a portion of the total proposals forwarded from the Victoria area but because of the overwhelming national response to the federal experiment they are the only ones left in the running for approval.

(From AP-Reuter)

Egypt told U.S. State Secretary William Rogers that before it will reopen the Suez canal, Israel will have to pull back 115 miles from the waterway and within six months agree to a timetable for withdrawal from all occupied Arab lands.

The Egyptians also refused to commit themselves to allowing Israeli ships to use the canal, saying only that they would study the question "within our political organizations" and take a stand later.

President Anwar Sadat Monday night gave this report of the talks last week with the American secretary of state. Sadat spoke to the 360-member parliamentary committee of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only political party.

Sadat described Rogers' Middle East mission as an effort to move negotiations "from a standstill to an active phase."

Reuter news agency reported a Sadat warning to the parliamentarians and cabinet ministers that Egypt would go to war if current political efforts fail in settling peacefully the Arab-Israeli conflict.
